THE FIRST WORD

A HUNDRED HURRAHS

THE NHL IS on the cusp of turning 100 and it doesn't seem a day over 99. Dads everywhere, feel free to use that one.

But seriously, our favorite league is looking swell for any age. There's a tendency for some media members (who, us?) and fans to criticize the NHL for perceived shortcomings, but that's more about how to improve a Ferrari than damning an Edsel. Besides, it's been said, if you look hard enough for problems or flaws, you're going to find them.

So instead of reprove, we'll revel as we enter this momentous season and look forward to a handful of things to be excited about:

The World Cup of Hockey. Best-on-best. In September. In a local time zone. Hoo. Ray.

Matthews vs. Laine. The beginning of a thing? We'll get our first glimpse at the end of the first week of the season, on Oct. 19, when the Maple Leafs visit Winnipeg.

The Return of Carey Price. Love or hate the Habs, the NHL is far better off when its superstars are healthy and showcased. We'll also be scrutinizing how much of a difference he truly makes.

P.K. Subban in Nashville. Like the stylish suits Subban sports, Music City feels like a tailored fit for the NHL's most engaging soul.

Shea Weber in Montreal. The majority says Montreal made a grave mistake. The bigger error might be underestimating Weber and provoking a proud professional.

Ron MacLean's Return. No disrespect to Rogers for trying something new, but they misread the labels on the skinny jeans. We don't doubt there are a lot of hipsters who like hockey, but they don't plan their lives around it, particularly on Saturday nights. And that wasn't going to change, regardless of who was handling the hosting duties for Hockey Night in Canada. On the other hand, the diehards, those of us who live, breathe, eat and inject the game are primarily nerds. Nerds relate well to the talented and punny MacLean because he's one of us.

Opening of Rogers Arena. The House that McDavid will build, though not literally.

Closing of the Joe. We can remember when this rink was the newbie on the circuit. So many memories, so many triumphs.

Centennial Classic. The shine of the outdoor game has faded, but this event in a market also celebrating its 100th season, and in a more intimate setting, feels more special.

World Junior Championship. The last time it was in Toronto and Montreal, it was splendiferous. (Yes, that's a real word. Thesaurus told me so.) More of the same, please.

Smaller Goalie Gear. When we discover this makes no difference, it will spur more expansive thinking, like, say, bigger nets.

Vegas. The nickname, jersey and expansion draft are still to come. Geeky fun.

40th Anniversary of Slap Shot. We haven't heard any specifics regarding a celebration, but a spokesman told us, "We're working on it."

Pavel Datsyuk in Arizona. Does this mean he'll go into the Hall of Fame as a Coyote? Dang, couldn't resist a dash of cynicism. It's in the blood.

McDavid is the biggest name in hockey in Canada, but until he and the Oilers start accomplishing something, he's just another player to NBC.

ANDY DEVLIN/NHLI VIA GETTY IMAGES

MOVING THE MCDAVID NEEDLE

The McDavid brand won't truly gain traction until the Oilers start winning, forcing NBC and the U.S. fan to pay attention

BY KEN CAMPBELL

IF CONNOR MCDAVID is as good as an Edmonton Oilers sophomore as he was as a rookie and plays an 82-game season, he'll put up 88 points in 2016-17. And if NHL scoring stays at about the same pace as it did last season, that would give him the Hockey Reference adjusted equivalent of a 98-point season. That's pushing the boundaries of the same stratosphere as the likes of Eric Lindros, Alex Ovechkin, Mario Lemieux, Wayne Gretzky and Sidney Crosby in their sophomore seasons.

And that's if McDavid's only as good as he was in 2015-16, when his season was truncated to 45 games (48 points) by a shoulder injury. If he's better, as THN's annual Fantasy Pool Guide suggests he will be – we have him scoring 96 points in 2016-17 – that will put him right in the midst of that group of superstars.

In Canada, McDavid has been a part of the hockey world's consciousness since he was 14, so most people here don't flinch much when they see an ad featuring McDavid fishing off a dock with a talking Penguin in a television commercial for the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce. Just 19 and with no NHL playoff games on his resume, McDavid already has partnerships with CCM, Canadian Tire and Biosteel, which have added at least $1.5 million in endorsement money to McDavid's portfolio, according to sports marketing expert Brian Cooper.

But when it comes to universal appeal, McDavid has a long way to go before he enters the consciousness of the casual American hockey fan. It doesn't help that neither McDavid nor the Oilers are scheduled to appear on one NBC game this season. When it comes to generating the highest viewership levels possible, the formula for NBC Sports is a combination of big markets, winning records and attractive matchups. And star power. The Oilers possess just one of those in McDavid.

That doesn't mean the Oilers will never appear on NBC, but the network will need to see something more than a tease from McDavid and Oilers. "As with any team, the Oilers can play their way onto our schedule," an NBC spokesperson said in an email to THN. "As they get more competitive, they'll see more airtime."

YOU CAN'T TALK ABOUT POTENTIAL. YOU HAVE TO TALK ABOUT THEIR ACCOMPLISHMENT

– Brian Cooper, sponsorship expert

It's a sentiment echoed by Cooper, the president and CEO of S&E Sponsorship, which represented a corporate client in negotiations with McDavid. In Canada, McDavid has already lived up to the hype that was being generated for the three years prior to him being drafted first overall in 2015. "You can't talk about potential, you have to talk about their accomplishments," Cooper said. "And he doesn't have an accomplishment yet. One of my clients negotiated a contract with him and, while there was a lot of appeal, I wasn't willing to pay for potential. There was a base we were willing to pay potential on, but it's heavy on performance."

And as terrific as McDavid was last season, he did not move the needle for the Oilers, a team that was only slightly better with him (18-24-3 for a .433 points percentage) than it was when he was injured (13-19-5, .419). Philadelphia defenseman Shayne Gostisbehere, who finished ahead of McDavid in voting for the Calder Trophy, played for a team that was 34-19-11 with him in the lineup and 7-8-3 when he was in the minors to start the season and later injured. Gostisbehere had such a positive impact on the Flyers that they might not have made the playoffs without him.

So the question remains, if McDavid ultimately becomes what much of the hockey world thinks he will become, which is the best player in the world, can he make that imprint in both Canada and the U.S. playing for a smaller-market, Mountain Time Zone-based team such as the Oilers?

Gretzky did make inroads in that area, but he didn't truly hit the big-time in terms of his brand until he was traded to Los Angeles. It was then that he became a transcendental figure. "No doubt about it," Cooper said of McDavid's chances of increasing his brand in Edmonton. "Because I'll tell you what will happen. The NHL will then put its support behind him. He would be their shining star, so you're going to make sure NBC covers him as well as any of the jewel events the NHL has like the All-Star Game and the NHL Awards."

With McDavid's Oilers moving into a new arena and a renewed enthusiasm for the roster and its potential, there is a lot to anticipate. But now is time for action. Not only must McDavid be otherworldly, the Oilers will have to hold up their end of the bargain and become a contending team. Only then will McDavid begin to become the face of the NHL.

FREE AGENT WATCH

There were some wise choices from last year's crop of UFAs, but next year's menu will have GMs salivating. Let the Brent Burns watch begin

BY RYAN KENNEDY

BRENT BURNS

2016-17

WE ALMOST HAD a huge one. For a while there, it really looked like Steven Stamkos was going to test the free agent waters. In the end, he stayed with Tampa Bay. But there were some big names that moved addresses in free agency this summer and some good deals – in terms of impact and contract – were made. Here are our top five:

BRIAN CAMPBELL CHICAGO Maybe not a typical No. 1, since Campbell is 37 and only signed for one year, but the veteran is just what Chicago needed: a mobile veteran who can take pressure off the overworked top dogs. Plus, he knows the town and has a Stanley Cup ring from his previous stay with the team.
CONTRACT: 1 year; $2.25 million AAV

KYLE OKPOSO BUFFALO Not only did the Sabres win the Okposo sweepstakes by inking the heavy and talented 28-year-old winger, but they also shook a reputation at the same time. Buffalo hasn't been great attracting free agent talent, but with a young core and dedicated ownership, that's changing. This signing could open the floodgates.
CONTRACT: 7 years, $6 million AAV

TROY BROUWER CALGARY He was a crucial part of the Blues' run to the conference final, and now he joins a Calgary team trying to get back to the playoffs. Brouwer's big body, heavy game and veteran presence make him a great foil for fellow forwards Johnny Gaudreau, Sean Monahan and Sam Bennett – the team's evolving young core. Brouwer, 31, is a playoff performer and Cup winner, with Chicago in 2010.
CONTRACT: 4 years, $4.5 million AAV

JASON DEMERS FLORIDA The Panthers souped up their blueline, building around Aaron Ekblad and Keith Yandle. Demers, 28, comes in to a top-four role fresh off a nice season in Dallas, where he played decent minutes and drove possession well.
CONTRACT: 5 years, $4.5 million AAV

LEE STEMPNIAK CAROLINA Stempniak is on his 10th NHL team, but that's only because the 33-year-old sniper seems to be in demand every trade deadline. Carolina got him for less than $3 million, which is pretty good for a guy who proved last season he could still score. He'll join a group of young forwards who can use his wisdom.

BESIDES RUINING THE UFApocalypse that would have been Stamkos, Tampa Bay Lightning GM Steve Yzerman also yanked Victor Hedman and Andrei Vasilevskiy off the 2017 market by getting their names on extensions. Oh well. There's still plenty to get excited about. Here are the top five potential UFAs for next summer:

BRENT BURNS SAN JOSE Beastly in both game and visage, Burns was huge on the Sharks blueline last year, putting in a near-Norris performance thanks to his offense and physical play. Burns, 31, led all NHL defensemen with 27 goals and his combination of talents would make him a huge get if the Sharks don't lock him down first.
CAP HIT: $5.76 million

BEN BISHOP TAMPA BAY Since the Bolts already signed Vasilevskiy, it would seem as though Bishop's tenure in Tampa won't last much longer. Which is incredible, because the towering stopper is one of the premier netminders around. If Bishop, 29, can stay healthy, he'll be a Vezina-caliber goalie for whichever team he ends up with.
CAP HIT: $5.95 million

BRAD MARCHAND BOSTON Oh, you hate to play against him, but you know you want him on your team. Marchand, 28, was a scoring machine last year, making magic with Patrice Bergeron. But he also proved at the World Championship he could succeed with other linemates. Marchand's combination of talent and nastiness is hard to find.
CAP HIT: $4.5 million

KEVIN SHATTENKIRK ST. LOUIS Top-end defenders are so hard to find, and Shattenkirk will still be just 28 if he gets to market next July. Mobile and offensively talented, he can log big minutes and lord over a power play. Trade rumors have swirled around him since last season, but the Blues are right to seek a big return if they are to deal him.
CAP HIT: $4.25 million

ALEX STEEN ST. LOUIS Steen plays against top lines and takes on all sorts of tough assignments, using smarts and physicality to get his job done. He led all St. Louis forwards in ice time and finished second to Vladimir Tarasenko in points. He will be 33 if he gets to the open market, but a short-term deal would pay dividends.
CAP HIT: $5.8 million

THE VEGAS EFFECT

The NHL's latest expansion franchise is still a year away from being born, but impact of the expansion draft is being felt already BY MIKE BROPHY

THE EXPANSION DRAFT that will stock the NHL's 31st franchise, the Las Vegas Lost Weekends…or something like that, is nearly a year away, but already teams are making strategic moves to prepare for it.

Current teams will have the option to protect just seven forwards, three defensemen and one goalie or eight skaters and one goalie. Existing teams can lose just one player in the expansion draft and first- and second-year players are exempt. The "one goalie" proviso is having the earliest impact, with some clubs having already shipped out keepers for fear of losing them for nothing in return. And there are more swaps to come.

The St. Louis Blues decided Jake Allen is their man between the pipes, so they traded Brian Elliott to the Calgary Flames. The Anaheim Ducks, with John Gibson and Frederik Andersen as their duo, figured to lose one of them, so they dealt Andersen to the Toronto Maple Leafs for first- and second-round picks. The Tampa Bay Lightning, having signed 22-year-old Andrei Vasilevskiy to a three-year contract for $3.5 million per season starting in 2017, will now surely trade Ben Bishop for the same reason.

Other goalies who will probably be available include Mike Smith of the Arizona Coyotes, Semyon Varlamov of the Colorado Avalanche, Marc-Andre Fleury of the Pittsburgh Penguins, Jimmy Howard of the Detroit Red Wings and Andrew Hammond of the Ottawa Senators.

The NHL's desire is for Las Vegas to be competitive right away. That said, the NHL's other 30 teams will do their best to manipulate their protected lists so the new franchise doesn't get any of its top players.

One NHL GM, who requested anonymity, said teams may go as far as keeping a player around for next season that they would otherwise move just to have him available to the incoming Las Vegas team. "Once you analyze your roster, you may want to keep a guy you'd otherwise try to trade if you have a strong feeling Vegas will pick him and stay away from your other players in the expansion draft," he said. "It's an unusual way to do business, but this is an unusual circumstance."

Las Vegas will choose 14 forwards, nine defensemen and three goalies with an aggregate expansion draft value between 60 and 100 percent of this season's upper limit for the salary cap.

Las Vegas will also have the opportunity to make trades prior to the expansion draft, with the hope of preventing "handshake" deals where Vegas avoids drafting a certain player from a team for a future payment.

The 30 NHL teams must submit their protected lists by 5 p.m. EST June 17, 2017 and Vegas must submit its expansion draft selections by 5 p.m. June 20. The selections will be released June 21.

ROOKIE WATCH

AUSTON MATTHEWS

A combination of teens fresh off the draft floor and prospects who've been marinating in development leagues are ready to take the NHL by storm. But who will snag the Calder?

BY RYAN KENNEDY

IT'S GOING TO be a sweet race for the Calder Trophy. Sure, the big injury to Connor McDavid took some shine off last year's derby (which we all thought was going to be a McDavid-Eichel heavyweight tilt), but the candidates for 2016-17 are varied and also elite. Not only did we get another excellent draft class in 2016, but some of the holdovers from 2015 and earlier are pretty special as well.

It's been a while since a goalie took rookie-of-the-year honors (Steve Mason, 2009), but after his Stanley Cup run, is it safe to doubt Matt Murray? On the other hand, McDavid's injury might have prevented a third-straight Calder for first-overall picks, since Aaron Ekblad and Nathan MacKinnon were previous winners. And Auston Matthews has that pedigree. There's always the chance an Artemi Panarin-type dark horse surprises again, but here are some of the big names to watch.

AUSTON MATTHEWS

TORONTO, C

The Arizona Kid will literally be front and center in Toronto, as the Maple Leafs get their No. 1 pivot of the future, today. Matthews will get shelter from the older Nazem Kadri down the middle, but make no mistake: the rookie's pedigree defines him as a rising star. Matthews has the size, smarts and skill to be a dominant force in the NHL and while big numbers should not be expected right away, he will grow alongside fellow young guns Mitch Marner and William Nylander, giving the franchise a much-needed offensive upgrade.

PATRIK LAINE

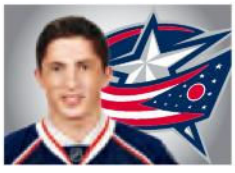
WINNIPEG, RW

Winnipeg is only one season removed from the playoffs and has some nice weapons up front in Mark Scheifele, Blake Wheeler and the ascending Nikolaj Ehlers. Laine is a bull with a wicked shot who spent the past season getting medals draped around his neck. The fact he was named MVP of the World Championship – a tournament filled with NHLers – bodes well for the teenager. Laine plays with a lot of confidence and spirit, so thoughts and prayers to the first NHLer who tries to stand him up at the blueline.

JESSE PULJUJARVI

EDMONTON, RW

No pressure, kid, but the Oilers traded Taylor Hall after they drafted you. While expectations will be high on Puljujarvi, there's no doubt the powerful right winger has the right pedigree. The world juniors MVP and world under-18 gold medallist boasts a great stride, fantastic playmaking ability and a responsible side. Plus, he's very competitive. He'll also be surrounded by some great offensive talent to help push his numbers in the right direction, and the presence of Connor McDavid means the spotlight won't sear too much.



ZACH WERENSKI

COLUMBUS, D

He's been on a high-speed train since 17, when he decided to fast-track high school in order to play for the University of Michigan a year early. All the gambles have paid off. When Werenski left the Wolverines after his sophomore year, he headed straight to the AHL, where he guided Lake Erie to Cleveland's first Calder Cup in more than 50 years. With size, mobility and the skills to play in all situations, Werenski will be the fourth horseman in Columbus' burgeoning top four along with Seth Jones, Ryan Murray and David Savard.

DYLAN STROME

ARIZONA, C

The table has been set for the middle Strome brother. The big center nearly made the team straight from the draft, but more seasoning in junior allowed time for Strome to add muscle to his frame. Now, he must seize a great opportunity in Arizona, where the Coyotes have strength on the wings but need someone down the middle. Strome has the smarts and the playmaking skills to feed those wingers, and with strong vets such as Shane Doan and Jamie McGinn around, he need not worry about being pushed around in his rookie campaign.

LAINE: ANDRE RINGUETTE/HHOF-IIHF IMAGES, MATTHEWS (TOP): DAVID KLUTHO/HHOF-IIHF IMAGES, HEADSHOTS: JEFF VINNICK/NHLI VIA GETTY IMAGES

STROME: DENNIS PAJOT/GETTY IMAGES, LINDELL: GLENN JAMES/NHLI VIA GETTY IMAGES

MIKKO RANTANEN
COLORADO, RW

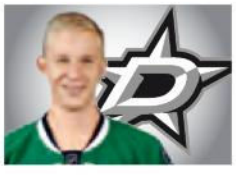
The Avalanche couldn't have asked for a better season from Rantanen. Not only did the teenager win World Junior Championship gold on home ice in Finland, but he also broke rookie records for goals, assists and points in AHL San Antonio. Rantanen started the season with the Avalanche, but without enough ice time to justify his presence, they wisely sent him down to play a bigger role. Rantanen, a power forward with a wire shot and great maturity, even got to kill penalties in San Antonio, so he'll be ready for anything with Colorado.

IVAN PROVOROV
PHILADELPHIA, D

Not that Evgeny Medvedev was going to be much of a hindrance anyway, but the Russian veteran's sudden departure from Philly bodes well for Provorov, who has pretty much run the show in major junior for two seasons now. The WHL defenseman of the year led the Brandon Wheat Kings to a league title and once again put up sick offensive numbers for a defenseman. Though the Flyers have a number of veterans under contract, they found space for Shayne Gostisbehere, and Provorov has just as much upside.

NICK SCHMALTZ
CHICAGO, C

Stan Bowman's burden is Schmaltz's golden opportunity. Chicago's GM once again had to make cap-saving trades this summer, and the exit of Teuvo Teravainen means Schmaltz had a great reason to leave North Dakota early. Coming off a national championship, the scintillating playmaker will now join another perennial winner with a Hawks moniker, though the stakes are now higher. Schmaltz, with his vision, will have no problem meshing with Chicago's talented forwards, and his high-skill game is perfect for the era.



ESA LINDELL
DALLAS, D

He may not be the best-known name out there, but Lindell has quietly put himself on track for a job in Dallas. Past the established top-four, there is room for ascent on the Stars and Lindell brings a big frame and great two-way play. He's ahead of Julius Honka and Jamie Oleksiak is on his last chance to prove he can be a regular NHLer. And while Lindell may not be a marquee name right now, he has already been on the international radar, earning a spot on Finland's World Cup team (and he didn't sneak in – he was part of the initial 16).

MATT MURRAY
PITTSBURGH, G

Like John Gibson the year prior, it's funny to think of Murray as a rookie, but he fits Calder criterion because he only played 13 regular season games. In the playoffs, he pulled a Ken Dryden and led the Penguins to a Stanley Cup, winning 15 games along the way. There is rampant speculation Murray has already usurped Marc-Andre Fleury in Pittsburgh, and while he may end up splitting duties initially, it's hard not to see the steel-nerved Murray as the No. 1 long term, especially with the expansion draft coming up.

WHAT'S NEW

The Leafs and Ducks are looking to the past for future inspiration. But they're not alone. From major staff shake-ups to jerseys and an entire downtown development based around a state-of-the-art arena, change is in the air for 2016-17 BY RYAN KENNEDY

JERSEYS

FLORIDA PANTHERS

The remaking of the Panthers hasn't been restricted to the on-ice product. Florida's new jerseys bring about the franchise's first major change since it was born in 1993. The panther itself is more realistic ("grown up," if you will), while the shoulder art features several cool innovations, such as military tabs – with captains getting special customized versions.

TORONTO MAPLE LEAFS

With the franchise's 100th season upon us, the Maple Leafs had to come out in style, so they put together a new look that still embraces the past. The logo itself draws elements from the 1940s and 1960s versions, while the 13 veins on top (for the franchise's 13 Stanley Cups) add another layer to the fun.

ARENA

ROGERS PLACE, EDMONTON

Rogers Place appears to be a big winner for the city of Edmonton and the Oilers. The architecture both inside and out looks marvelous, and, of course, there will be all sorts of tech goodies for fans, including what is being billed as the largest "true" high definition scoreboard in the NHL. Taking a cue from the Buffalo Sabres, Edmonton built its new rink right downtown to be a potential magnet for the city. It's all part of a huge undertaking in the city known as the Ice District. Condos, a casino and a public plaza are also in the works in the area.

COACHES

RANDY CARLYLE ANAHEIM

Everything old is new again in Anaheim, as the Ducks brought back the only coach to lead the franchise to a Stanley Cup championship. Carlyle did it with at least three Hall of Famers on his roster (Chris Pronger, Scott Niedermayer and Teemu Selanne), but still – he did it. The years since have been a struggle, and the big question is whether the veteran can coach a puck possession game.

GUY BOUCHER OTTAWA

A rare double-Swiss hire, as the Sens bring in Guy Boucher and a new associate coach in Marc Crawford, both of whom coached in Switzerland last season. Boucher gets his second NHL shot after a previous stint in Tampa Bay, while Crawford brings a Stanley Cup title from his Colorado days. Boucher was in a tough situation with the Lightning when he was let go. Yet, at the time, some of his veterans seemed to have tuned out. That won't be a problem in Ottawa, with a younger team that needs guidance and a bit of a jump-start.

BRUCE BOUDREAU MINNESOTA

Game 7s continue to be Boundreau's white whale, but there is no question the affable bench boss has a knack for building squads into contenders. The Wild seem to be at a crossroads as a good-but-not-great team, so Boudreau's task is simple: nourish the young talent and get the veterans moving alongside them in a positive direction. It won't be easy in the Central, but Boudreau is a regular-season ace.

GLEN GULUTZAN CALGARY

Gulutzan, another coach getting a second kick at the can in the NHL, was young when he had the job in Dallas. Now he returns to helm a team with plenty of young talent. Johnny Gaudreau, Sean Monahan and Sam Bennett will all make the coach's job a little easier, but expectations for the team are high since the goaltending problem seems to have been solved with the acquisition of Brian Elliott. Before landing the Flames job, Gulutzan was an assistant coach in Vancouver. During his first year, he was under John Tortorella – whose other assistant was future Penguins coach Mike Sullivan.

GMs

JOHN CHAYKA ARIZONA

The boy wonder from southern Ontario became the youngest GM in NHL history when the Coyotes hired him at 26, and Chayka has not shrunk from the task. He is an advanced stats star who is in charge of implementing coach/VP of hockey ops Dave Tippett's big picture vision for the squad. His first big coup was landing veteran defenseman Alex Goligoski. He then showed some boldness in taking on Pavel Datsyuk's dead contract from Detroit to move up with his second pick in the draft, which he used to pluck the falling Jakob Chychrun.

TOM ROWE FLORIDA

Similar to Chayka's situation, Rowe comes into a GM's role with a big name still in the house. Former GM and Panthers architect Dale Tallon will now focus more on talent evaluation and less on paperwork, and Rowe will have a lot of help elsewhere too: the Cats have really shaken up their brain trust and embraced analytics. Rowe got busy early, landing Keith Yandle and remaking his defense corps around cornerstone Aaron Ekblad.

FIVE LEGENDS WHO WAITED FOR THE CUP

Think 'Ovie' just isn't a winner? Be patient. These stars had long waits for their first Cup

BY SEAN MCINDOE

ALEX OVECHKIN HAS been criticized for a lack of production at key moments and an inability to lead the Capitals to a deep playoff run. Not everyone agrees, with plenty of voices defending Ovechkin's track record. But the fact remains that 11 years into his NHL career, Ovechkin has racked up record-breaking numbers and plenty of individual awards, but no Stanley Cup.

So it may be worth remembering that still leaves him in pretty good company. Plenty of legendary NHLers never won it all, with names like Marcel Dionne, Gilbert Perreault and Darryl Sittler failing to earn a ring. But there have also been plenty of superstars who did get their Cup – they just had to wait for it. And in some cases, they waited a lot longer than Ovechkin has.

So let's offer up some hope to Ovechkin (not to mention guys like Henrik Lundqvist, Roberto Luongo, Joe Thornton and the Sedins) by remembering five legendary players who took until at least their 12th season to finally get their hands on a Cup.

RAY BOURQUE

THE LONG WAIT: Probably the first name that came to your mind when you saw this list, Bourque's drought lasted a stunning 21 years, during which he captured five Norris Trophies and was a first-team all-star 12 times. Despite being his generation's best defenseman, he debuted in the 1970s and made it to the turn of the millennium without earning a ring.

WORST NEAR-MISS: The Bruins made the final twice during Bourque's career, in 1988 and 1990. But both times, they ran into the Edmonton Oilers, and they only managed to win one game between the two series. (They also managed to become the only team in final history to be swept in five games, thanks to a Boston Garden power failure that forced the suspension of a game in 1988.)

HOW IT FINALLY ENDED: The good news for Ovechkin is that Bourque finally did get his Cup. The bad news for Caps fans is that it took a trade for it to happen. The Bruins dealt Bourque (at his request), sending him to Colorado at the trade deadline in 2000. The Avs didn't win it all that year, but Bourque returned for one more run, and finally got his Stanley Cup in 2001, leading to an iconic Cup-pass from Joe Sakic.

DOMINIK HASEK
DETROIT RED WINGS, 2002

THE LONG WAIT: Hasek's career was all about waiting. He didn't make the NHL until he was 25 and didn't become a full-time starter until he was 28. But from there he quickly established himself as the league's very best, winning the Vezina six times in eight years. But with the Sabres declining and a big option year payday looming, Hasek's time in Buffalo came to an end in 2001 without a title.

WORST NEAR-MISS: Well, there was that certain Brett Hull goal in the 1999 final...

HOW IT FINALLY ENDED: It's easy to forget now, but the trade that sent Hasek to Detroit was an odd one at the time. The Red Wings already had Chris Osgood, who'd won two Cups with them. But Hasek represented a clear upgrade, so they made the move, and it paid off. They won the Cup, Hasek got his ring, and then retired. It was a storybook ending. (Then he came back a year later, shivving Curtis Joseph and eventually teaming with a returning Osgood to win a second Cup in 2008. Look, it was Dominik Hasek; the storybook ending was always going to be a weird one.)

JOHNNY BUCYK
BOSTON BRUINS, 1970

THE LONG WAIT: The future Hall of Famer broke into the NHL with the Red Wings in 1955. After two years in Detroit, he was dealt to Boston for Terry Sawchuk in what turned out to be one of the bigger trades in NHL history. Much like Bourque, he found that winning a Cup in Boston was easier said than done.

WORST NEAR-MISS: Bucyk and the Bruins lost in the final his first year there, in 1958, and were defeated in the de facto final (because the winner would play the second-year St. Louis Blues for the Cup) in 1969. In between, they endured an eight-year stretch where they missed the playoffs every season.

HOW IT FINALLY ENDED: In his 15th season and just two days before his 35th birthday, Bucyk finally got his first Cup in 1970 when Bobby Orr scored his famous overtime winner. Bucyk won a second Cup two years later, and played in the NHL until the age of 42.

TEEMU SELANNE
ANAHEIM DUCKS, 2007

THE LONG WAIT: Selanne was drafted in 1988, debuted in 1992, played for four teams and was an all-star 10 times once the 2007 playoffs arrived. But at 36, he'd never been to a Stanley Cup final. And much like Ovechkin, he made it through the first dozen years of his career without even making it out of the second round.

WORST NEAR-MISS: Selanne finally got a taste of the conference final in 2006 with the Ducks before losing to the upstart Oilers. But his toughest miss probably came in 2003-04, when Selanne and Paul Kariya took massive pay cuts to join a star-studded Avalanche team that looked like it could steamroll to a championship. Instead, he had the least productive season of his career and the Avs went out in Round 2. To make matters worse, they were knocked out by the Sharks, the team Selanne had left to come to Colorado.

HOW IT FINALLY ENDED: Selanne and the Ducks finally broke through in 2007, beating the Senators in five to capture the Cup for the first time. Everyone felt happy Selanne could ride off into the sunset with a title. Then he played for seven more years.

STEVE YZERMAN

THE LONG WAIT: Let's take pity on Washington fans by ending with a guy who won his championship without ever playing a game for another franchise. Despite being recognized as one of the best players of his generation, Yzerman was still without a Cup 13 years into his career. That was despite putting up gaudy offensive numbers and leading the Red Wings to all sorts of regular season success, both of which may sound familiar to Caps fans.

In fact, as bizarre as it sounds now, there was a time when it wasn't uncommon to hear hockey fans talk about Yzerman the same way so many talk about Ovechkin today. He was a regular season player, a numbers guy who didn't know how to come through when it counted. There was even talk of trading him, including a rumored deal that would send him to Ottawa for Alexei Yashin.

Think about that: there were people who thought that if Detroit wanted to win it all, the team had to replace Yzerman with Yashin – and their ranks included plenty of Red Wings fans. Keep that in mind the next time somebody tries to tell you the Capitals need to move on from Ovechkin.

WORST NEAR-MISS: The Red Wings were swept in the 1995 Cup final, but 1996 was probably more painful. That was the year the Wings won an NHL-record 62 games, then lost to the Avs in the conference final, which launched the legendary rivalry between the two teams.

HOW IT FINALLY ENDED: The Red Wings didn't panic after that 1996 disappointment. They stayed the course, added a few more pieces, and passed on Yashin-for-Yzerman. Then they went out and won back-to-back Cups, followed by a third in 2002. Yzerman retired in 2006 and is now viewed as one of the greatest winners in NHL history. If you're an Ovechkin fan looking for the best-case scenario, it looks a lot like this.

Now 25, Hedman is far removed from the player who, by his own admission today, was overwhelmed and overly self-critical when he broke into the league as an 18-year-old.

SETTING A NEW STANDARD

As a teen, Hedman was compared to a towering Hall of Famer. Seven years later, he's now the benchmark by which big, skilled defensemen will be measured BY UFFE BODIN

Being dubbed "the second coming of Chris Pronger" is tough to live up to. Just ask Victor Hedman. Heralded as one of the most intriguing prospects to play in the Swedish League, Hedman had everything going for him in 2007 when he burst onto the scene with Modo at 16. Scouts drooled over his rare blend of skill, size and skating ability, and media proclaimed him the next big Swedish thing in the NHL.

But the road to stardom was bumpier than anyone, himself included, had anticipated. During his first few seasons with the Tampa Bay Lightning, who picked him second overall in 2009, Hedman struggled to meet expectations, especially his own. "It was a pretty long process with a lot of ups and downs for me," Hedman said. "I came here when I was 18, faced superstars every night and played against big men at a fast pace. It was a very tough adjustment for me."

Having achieved success as a creative, offense-minded player at every level, Hedman expected nothing less in the NHL. But when things didn't work, he got caught in a rut. "The biggest hurdle for me was accepting that you sometimes make mistakes," he said. "In the beginning, I always tried to overcompensate for every mistake I made, and I wound up doing too much, trying to be too spectacular. That created a domino effect."

There wasn't one moment when everything turned around, but the Lightning signing Hedman to a five-year deal in late 2011 helped significantly. The commitment boosted his confidence and made him realize management had patience with his development. Although there were times he felt disheartened about his game, he didn't stop believing in his abilities. "I never hid or became passive, I stuck to my guns," he said. "It's all about learning when, where and how to do things. Today, one of my main strengths is that I know how to balance my game. I know when I should join the rush and when I should sit back. I know when I should look for that opening pass and when I should dump the puck. You could say I've learned it the hard way, but compared to where I was a few years ago, it feels like I've made a long and pretty cool journey."

Often with hulking defensemen in the mold of Pronger and Zdeno Chara, it takes them longer to fill out their frames, gain mastery over their limbs and develop the co-ordination needed to handle the on-ice chaos. Hedman went through these same ordeals, but thanks to a fellow countryman and former NHL defenseman, his physical status has improved greatly over the past few years.

Hans Jonsson played 242 games with the Pittsburgh Penguins between 1999 and 2003. After his playing career ended, he took the Gary Roberts route and became a personal trainer, specializing in hockey players. "He felt that he had been practising the wrong way when he was active," Hedman said about Jonsson. "He had a lot of back problems and other injuries. So when he got his education, he devoted himself to preventing others from making the mistakes he felt he had made. He's very dedicated, and I owe a lot of my own success to him. My endurance is much better today as I've been trained to handle 25 to 30 minutes a night for 82 games and the playoffs."

After spending the past seven years with the Lightning, Hedman secured his long-term future with the franchise by agreeing to a new eight-year contract extension worth $63 million this summer. The deal was presented only two days after captain Steven Stamkos had put his signature on an eight-year pact of his own. This was no coincidence. Stamkos quickly pointed out how much Hedman's presence meant to his decision to stay in Tampa Bay. And the feeling is mutual. "We had a lot of contact during this process and knew where we had each other," Hedman said. " 'Stammer' and I have been playing together for so long and have become really good friends who hang out. We're the only two left since we started here in Tampa. Since then, there have been new coaches, a new GM and a new owner. We've been through a lot together, and that has made our relationship very strong."

YOU COULD SAY I'VE LEARNED THE HARD WAY, BUT COMPARED TO WHERE I WAS A FEW YEARS AGO, IT FEELS LIKE I'VE MADE A LONG AND PRETTY COOL JOURNEY

With the two friends renewing their commitment to the Lightning, the team will be a Stanley Cup contender for years to come. And Hedman, now 25, has become that Norris Trophy-caliber rearguard everyone assumed he would be. Although he doesn't display the snarl reminiscent of Pronger, Hedman is in the midst of creating a standard of his own: now he's the big, skilled, smooth-skating defenseman who prospects will be compared to in the future. THE EVOLUTION OF P.K. SUBBAN

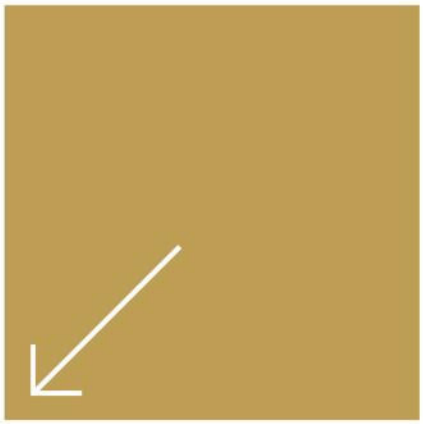
The P.K. brand is a carefully cultivated image that runs a lot deeper than the name on the back and the logo on the front of the jersey. It's more about philosophy than pucks. That persona wasn't forever in Montreal, but it'll start up again in Nashville

BY RONNIE SHUKER



There's a heat warning in effect for Toronto on this sultry Saturday afternoon in mid-June, the kind that forces pedestrians to seek respite on the side of the street where shade is cast. In a studio of a nondescript warehouse block in the city's nondescript east end, however, the heat isn't bothering P.K. Subban, who just changed into a velvet burgundy jacket for his next shot. He's mugging for the camera in support of a new line of suits he helped sketch for RW&Co., and despite only intermittent air conditioning, there isn't a bead of sweat in sight on him.

Still, something's amiss. It's the vibe that's throwing him off, not the heat. He's not feeling the music, so he shouts across the room to his brother Malcolm and asks him to change the tune and pump up the volume. As an Amy Winehouse doppelganger fixes Subban's suit, the intro to Drake's "Started from the Bottom" begins. The brothers exchange smiles and let out a subtle "Yyyeeeaaahhh" in approval. When the beat kicks in, Subban starts dancing, nodding his head in sync with the rhythm. As his groove returns, the camera starts firing away.

It's rare to see Subban miss a beat. He is so comfortable in front of a camera, so candid in interviews, that you get the sense his evolution from chubby kid in a forgotten part of Toronto into chiselled NHL superstar was bred right into his DNA. His backstory, well documented, is the stuff of childhood dreams: A young kid, the son of immigrants, starts with little in an uninspiring urban neighborhood. His father, who works two jobs to keep his five children fed and give them every opportunity to succeed, takes his eldest son skating every winter night, often into the wee hours of the morning. He builds a rink in the family's backyard, and the boy's hard work combines with his physical gifts and natural talent. He rises through the ranks of youth hockey, then to major junior and on to pro. After one year in the AHL, he reaches the top of the hockey world – the NHL. And from there, he evolves into one of the game's most electric players and by far its biggest personality. It's now been seven years since Subban turned pro and six since he took the NHL by storm during the 2010 playoffs, if you can believe it. He sure can't. "I have no idea where seven years went," Subban says. "It's going to be my eighth year next year. I still feel like I'm 21, but everyone's like, 'No, P.K., you're 27.' You know? And next year, I'll be 28. It's crazy. It's nuts."

Until recently, all those years had come in the Montreal Canadiens organization. But in the middle of June, less than two weeks before being traded, Subban doesn't want to talk about the team, or hockey for that matter. Whether he knows it or not, his eighth year of pro hockey won't be in Montreal. He certainly doesn't know it will be in Nashville, who trades their captain, Shea Weber, to acquire Subban 11 days later, on June 29. Given the eight-year, $72-million deal Subban signed with the Canadiens two summers ago, he probably expected to remain a Hab for life, like some of the lifelong Canadiens he looked up to, including the late Jean Beliveau. Instead, he's more like Patrick Roy – a controversial superstar, beloved by the fans, who was shipped out of Montreal in his prime of his career after a rift with the coach.

After six-plus years as a Canadien, the evolution of P.K. Subban is about to enter its next phase. Right smack in his playing prime, he finds himself having to adapt to a new environment in Nashville, which is about as close to Montreal in hockey culture as country music is to hip hop. Whereas Subban's playlist includes Drake and Eminem, the Predators often showcase Vince Gill on stage during intermissions of home games. In their 107-year history, the Canadiens have won 24 Stanley Cups, which is more than the number of years (19) the Predators have been in existence. There are about as many reporters covering the Canadiens as there are players on the team, while the Predators have just one beat reporter listed in the NHL media directory. Hockey is everything in Montreal, and no other player was more scrutinized there than Subban over the past six years. Not that the heat ever seemed to bother him. In his first TV interview after the trade, Subban said, "I know I'm not perfect. But at the end of the day, you have to be willing to take the heat."

The spotlight will be significantly less bright in Nashville, where hockey is still somewhat niche, despite a growing fan base. Yet that should suit Subban just fine, too. Unlike many of his peers in the NHL, hockey isn't the be-all and end-all. And playing in a non-traditional market will free him to indulge in his non-hockey interests. "I feel sad for someone who has (just) one thing that defines them as a person," Subban says. "I don't think that's really healthy…Somebody who says, 'Oh, hockey is my life, it's everything,' it's like, OK, well, when it's over, then what do you do, you know?"

Subban has long known he's more than just a hockey player. In his early twenties, he was already telling the world he's a guy who plays hockey, not a hockey player. It's a subtle distinction, but it's significant. Subban is far more philosophical about his career than most players. Many eat, sleep, think, dream, breathe and bathe hockey and only hockey – all day, every day – and don't come to the realization they still have half their life,

I DON'T THINK THERE'S ANYBODY LIKE ME. I ALWAYS FEEL THAT I'M VERY DISTINCT IN WHO I AM

FOR ANYONE TO DESCRIBE ME WHO I NEVER MET, I LAUGH AT THAT. I THINK IT'S HILARIOUS

or more, to live after it's over. It's usually only when they get married, have kids or near the end of their career that they give thought to what they might do and who they might be after they are finished with hockey – or, as is more often the case, hockey is finished with them. They certainly don't think about it when they're single, childless, famous, fabulously rich and still just 27.

From anyone else, that outlook would give off the air of an athlete with a half-hearted love for the game and a half-assed dedication to it. Yet no one, not even his detractors (and there are many), doubts Subban's passion or his commitment to his craft. Before arriving at the studio by 9 a.m., Subban got to the gym for one of his two-a-day workouts. And midway through the six-hour shoot, he shows no signs of fatigue. He's a boundless ball of energy who simply needs multiple outlets to release it, and in front of the camera is one of his most natural environments to do that in.

For all the camera time and public appearances, however, there are sides of himself Subban doesn't divulge. When pressed for details of his workout, he doesn't relent. Despite saying he can't wait for the season to get started, he doesn't want to talk about training for it. He says he doesn't want people to know that side of him. Perhaps a sweaty Subban conflicts with the perfectly polished brand he has worked so hard to create. Regardless, he seems fine if the public perception of him is enthusiastic goal celebrations, flashy suits, contagious smiles and contentious quotes. If people don't know what goes on behind the scenes, well, then, so much the better. Subban is one of those players everyone seems to have an opinion of, good or bad, and he has no problem with that. "For anybody to describe me who I've never met, I mean, I laugh at that. I think it's hilarious," Subban said. "When people are like, 'This is P.K.' I'm like, 'I've never met that guy before in my life, and he seems to have a firm opinion on who I am.' You know, they could never put me on a talk show with those people, because they'd be made a fool."

Not that Subban hasn't stoked those opinions with some occasional tomfoolery. During the 2010 playoffs, Don Cherry was the first to call out Subban for his over-the-top goal celebrations and on-ice chirping, calling his antics disrespectful to the game. Soon afterward, a fellow player weighed in on Subban, when Mike Richards, then of Philadelphia, made a similar charge, intimating retribution would be coming Subban's way if the 21-year-old rookie kept disrespecting his peers.

Controversy followed Subban on his own team, too. Over his six years in Montreal, he got into altercations at practice with teammates Tomas Plekanec, David Desharnais and Max Pacioretty, and rumors of tension in the dressing room between Subban and the rest of the team were often in the air. Whether they were true, truish or completely fabricated, fans in Montreal didn't seem to care. They almost unanimously adored him. When the trade went down, fans went berserk, irate the organization had dealt its most beloved player. For whatever reason, those calling the shots in Habs management never embraced their superstar like the fans did, his personality deemed too individual to fit with hockey's traditional ideal of the collective.

However people choose to describe him, Subban owns himself unconditionally. He says he has matured since his perceived cockiness rubbed hockey's culture barons the wrong way, though admits he still has more to do. Still, he remains as brash as he was when hockey's self-anointed sentinels of tradition started calling him out for a lack of respect. And he's unapologetic about wearing many hats, not just a helmet. He's a hockey player, yes, but he's also a brand, a businessman, an artist and a philanthropist. "I don't think there's anybody like me," Subban says. "I always feel that I'm very distinct in who I am. I'm very comfortable with who I am, but I do things differently than maybe most 27-year-olds."

That distinctiveness includes knowing what he likes, and Subban likes everything to be just right. For him, it's all about the finer points of the finest things. He gets his haircut every two or three days (that's right, days, not weeks), and he talks about his suits like a marine would his rifle. His suits have to fit perfectly or he won't wear them, no matter how stylish and well designed. His pocket square has to be half an inch above the pocket line, no more, and never in a triangle. His tie has to be a double Windsor, nothing else. His pants have to be long enough so his socks don't show when he's standing up yet short enough so they ride up just the right height to reveal a carefully selected pair running up over his ankles. The socks, you should know, are always patterned, never plain. Whatever he's wearing, though, what you see is only half of what you get with Subban. "If you have a good man and a s---ty suit, that doesn't work. If you have a s---ty man and a good suit, that still doesn't work," he says. "I believe you need both. You can't have one without the other."

Behind the scenes at the photo shoot, Subban is as playful and accommodating as he is in front of the camera, even though he's in his fourth hour of shooting, and there's still another shot to do. In between, he opens up an hour to the media. Unlike most of his peers, Subban doesn't see interviews as a necessary evil – the price a player has to pay for getting paid millions. It's an opportunity for him to create his own narrative, a chance to direct his own show and not let someone else write the public script for his life. At one point, he sternly shushes his entourage in the studio for being too loud during a TV interview. For all his humor, affability and playfulness, he exudes Jonathan Toews-like seriousness when it comes to the business of being P.K. Subban. "When people think of a brand, they can see it as self-centered, but it's not really about that," Subban says. "I should be able to have a say on what I want people to talk about when it comes to me. In order to do that, you've got to take control of it, because media and people will build their own perceptions of you."

Since Subban arrived in the NHL with his hair on fire in 2010, his evolution has been swift. He won the Norris Trophy as the NHL's best defenseman barely a month after turning 24, the second-youngest player to do so in nearly 30 years. And he's well on his way to becoming a millionaire so many times over that he could afford to donate some of those cool millions to the Montreal Children's Hospital last year. Subban has made it, and now he has it made. He knows hockey won't last forever, so he's taking advantage of his sports celebrity by parlaying it into other worlds he can live in when his playing career is over.

The next phase of his evolution begins this fall in Tennessee. Whatever that turns out to be, we know this much: the heat won't bother him. Like every NHL player, he wants to win a Stanley Cup. No surprise there. But unlike the others, it's not Stanley Cup or bust for Subban. "When I first came into the NHL, my mindset was different then than it is now after six years," Subban said. "You learn, you understand the game, you understand your business, you understand that you can't play hockey for the rest of your life. As much as I hope I have a lot of years ahead of me, it doesn't last forever, so you have to realize that and realize what you want out of it. For me, the No. 1 thing is I want a Stanley Cup. But there are other things in life. There are other things in my career that I want to accomplish as well. That's not the only thing." H

Brodie may have gotten into plenty of mischief as a kid – leading to his parents often calling him by his full name, Thomas James, instead of his initials, T.J. – but he rarely gets into trouble on the ice.

SMALL TALK, BIG MINUTES

Brodie is a man of so few words, the hockey world outside Calgary hardly knows a thing about the most unheralded D-men in the NHL. That's about to change BY RANDY SPORTAK

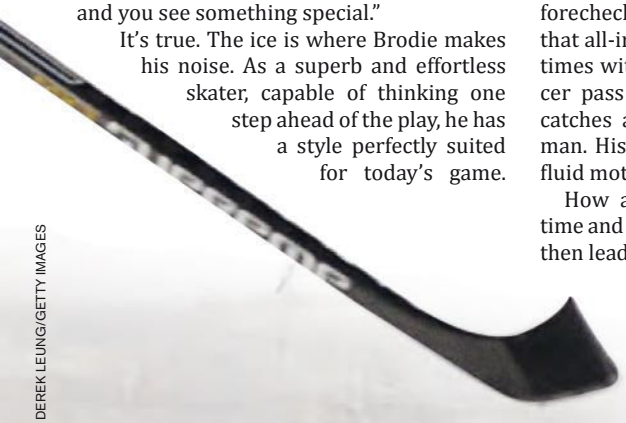
The expression was deadpan, the reaction unassuming. Just as to be expected by anybody who knows T.J. Brodie.

Told he was to be the subject of an 800-word personality piece, Brodie replied, "Good luck, 800 words on me is a lot."

Don't take it the wrong way; Brodie is always as polite and cordial as you'd expect from a down-home, farmboy from Dresden, Ont. He's soft-spoken and avoids talking about himself at all costs.

It's not that he lacks personality (When asked whether he has always gone by his initials instead of his given name, he said, with just the hint of a grin, "Except for when I was in trouble with my parents or anything legal, then it's Thomas James. The guys get a chuckle when we're in public and I'm called Thomas. They don't even know that's really my name."). It's just that Brodie, who celebrated his 26th birthday in June, is extremely low-key, the kind of guy who avoids limelight and attention and would rather stay home and watch a movie than be out on the town. "He was the same way in our league," said Marty Williamson, coach of the OHL's Niagara IceDogs who guided Brodie and the Barrie Colts in 2009-10. "At first, we thought we had to get him more pumped up but realized you don't have to. Then you watch him on the ice and you see something special."

It's true. The ice is where Brodie makes his noise. As a superb and effortless skater, capable of thinking one step ahead of the play, he has a style perfectly suited for today's game.



DEREK LEUNG/GETTY IMAGES

Still, on a Flames club that features Mark Giordano and up-and-comer Dougie Hamilton on the blueline, plus a couple dynamic forwards in Johnny Gaudreau and Sean Monahan, Brodie is often a forgotten figure outside of Calgary. "I think that's fair to say," said St. Louis Blues defenseman and former Colts teammate Alex Pietrangelo. "When you have a D-corps like the Flames have, he can get overshadowed."

But to those who follow the team's fortunes closely, it's no surprise the Flames won only four of a dozen games last season when Brodie was on the shelf due to injury.

Need a blueliner capable of retrieving the puck in the defensive zone, avoiding the forechecker with a spin move, before making that all-important first pass up the ice, many times with a jaw-dropping backhanded saucer pass or 100-foot tape-to-tape job that catches a player mid-stride? Brodie's your man. His ability to perform these all in one fluid motion is off the charts.

HE'S A TOP-FIVE DEFENSEMAN, THERE'S NO DOUBT ABOUT THAT...MOST NIGHTS, HE'S USUALLY THE BEST PLAYER ON THE ICE

– Mark Giordano

How about a defenseman who can buy time and space with a head-fake to gain a step then lead the rush? Again, just tap Brodie.

Oh yeah, if that same skater who began the rush has to high-tail it back to defend, he's one of the best at that, too. "It's like he teleports from one end to the other," said ex-teammate Joe Colborne, who played with Brodie the past three seasons in Calgary before signing with Colorado.

Added Giordano, the Flames' captain: "He's a top-five D-man in the NHL. There's no doubt about it. We play all the best D-men... and does it look like they're that much better than him or ahead of him? I don't think so. Most nights, he's usually the best player on the ice."

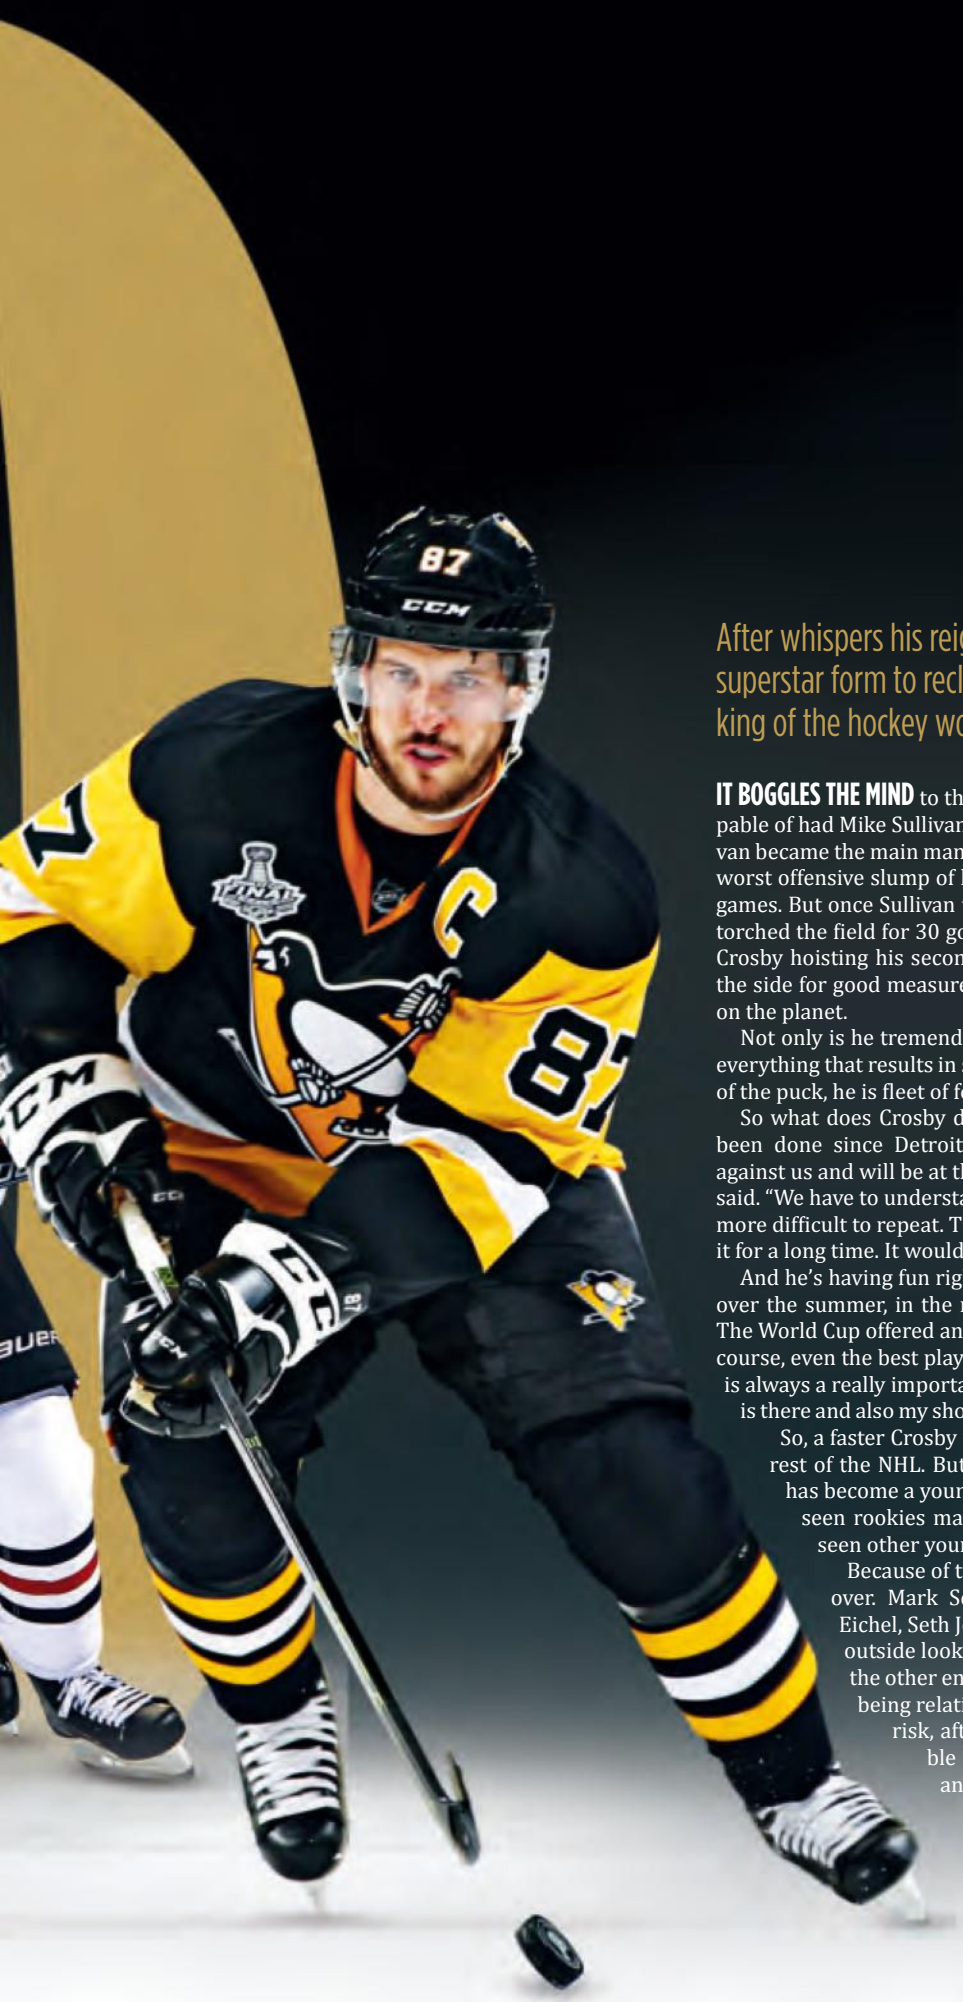
Heady praise from a teammate and often defense partner, but it's not as over-the-top as you'd first think.

It was no secret Brodie was in the mix to fill out the blueline on Canada's World Cup roster, one that included Duncan Keith, Shea Weber, Marc-Edouard Vlasic and Drew Doughty. He was a long shot against the likes of Pietrangelo, Brent Burns, Jake Muzzin, P.K. Subban, Kris Letang and Giordano, but the consideration was warranted. During the season, Brodie finished top 20 in scoring among defensemen, with 45 points, and 11th in average ice time per game despite seeing very little power play time.

Although Brodie wasn't named to Team Canada, the boost of confidence will help him and the Flames moving forward. "It's exciting to know people are looking at you for that tournament," he said. "It's definitely surprising with all the great defensemen in the league. I never expected to be mentioned among those guys."

That attention, however, is coming with a price. People want to know more about him. Fortunately, at least with his teammates, Brodie has come out of his shell over the past year, knowing he's a big part of the club's future. He's even more and more often throwing his dry humor lines into conversations in the hopes of getting a rise. "Some of his theories on different things and comments are way out in space, they make you laugh," Giordano said with a chuckle and a shake of the head. "He has a great sense of humor, but he waits for everyone else to have their say and then puts his two cents in."

THE NHL'S TOP



After whispers his reign had ended, Crosby regained his superstar form to reclaim the Cup – and his crown as king of the hockey world BY RYAN KENNEDY

IT BOGGLES THE MIND to think about what Sidney Crosby may have been capable of had Mike Sullivan coached Pittsburgh all season long. Before Sullivan became the main man behind the bench, Crosby was in the midst of the worst offensive slump of his career, with just six goals and 19 points in 28 games. But once Sullivan took over for the deposed Mike Johnston, Crosby torched the field for 30 goals and 66 points in 52 games. In the end, it was Crosby hoisting his second Stanley Cup – with a Conn Smythe Trophy on the side for good measure – while reclaiming his crown as the best player on the planet.

Not only is he tremendously skilled and a leader, but Crosby represents everything that results in success in today's NHL. He is strong on both sides of the puck, he is fleet of foot and he is tenacious.

So what does Crosby do for an encore? Well, back-to-back titles hasn't been done since Detroit in 1997-98. "Teams will measure themselves against us and will be at their best because of the fact we won last year," he said. "We have to understand that, as challenging as it was to win, it is even more difficult to repeat. That's our goal, and there hasn't been a team to do it for a long time. It would be quite the accomplishment."

And he's having fun right now. Once again, Crosby held his hockey camp over the summer, in the rink he grew up playing in, back in Nova Scotia. The World Cup offered another chance to pull on that Canada jersey and of course, even the best player in the world was working on his game. "Speed is always a really important part of my game," he said. "Making sure speed is there and also my shot – I need to do a better job of using it sometimes."

So, a faster Crosby who shoots more? That doesn't bode well for the rest of the NHL. But who follows Crosby? Perhaps because the NHL has become a young man's league, the choices were legion. We have seen rookies make deep impacts in recent years, but we've also seen other youngsters make big jumps in development quickly.

Because of that, expect next year's list to feature a lot of turnover. Mark Scheifele, Justin Faulk, Nathan MacKinnon, Jack Eichel, Seth Jones – all great and worthy, but ultimately on the outside looking in for now. And how will age affect players on the other end? For now, some of the old warhorses (and we're being relative here, since past 30 now qualifies as a contract risk, after all) are still representing for the perma-stubble crowd. But for how long? Let's get to the names and sort out who will rule the NHL in 2016-17.

01 | SIDNEY CROSBY PITTSBURGH | C | LAST YEAR: 4

He can play the game any way you need him to – and fast. Crosby was the Conn Smythe winner for the Stanley Cup champion Penguins, turning in a beautiful two-way performance that stifled San Jose's top guns and restored him to the league's throne.

02 | PATRICK KANE CHICAGO | RW | LAST YEAR: 11

Consider him a harbinger for the near future: a quick and agile offensive force who doesn't need size to get the job done. Kane ran away with the scoring title and helped Artemi Panarin figure out the NHL quick enough to nab the Calder Trophy. Kane has moves other NHLers love to watch.

03 | CAREY PRICE MONTREAL | G | LAST YEAR: 1

With him, the Habs were a deep playoff threat. Without him, they were in deep trouble. While Price can't win a Cup by himself, he could probably come close. And with a clean bill of health, he will re-stake his claim as the best goaltender in the world. Size and incredible poise are his calling cards.

04 | JAMIE BENN DALLAS | LW | LAST YEAR: 12

If you want old-school power hockey, Benn is your flag-bearer. On a souped-up Stars team, he leads the way along with his superb center, Tyler Seguin. But Benn's physical nastiness and ability to steamroll his way to the net make him the No. 1 option in Dallas (and he's got the 'C' to prove it).

05 | JONATHAN TOEWS CHICAGO | C | LAST YEAR: 2

He plays against top lines and still finds time to put up solid offensive numbers. Toews may not reach 80 points, but keeping opponents at bay while Kane does damage will suffice. Toews was also the NHL's best faceoff man (58.6 win percentage) and a demon on the PK with four shorthanded goals.

06 | DREW DOUGHTY LOS ANGELES | D | LAST YEAR: 8

A deserved Norris Trophy winner, Doughty does everything and he does it all well. From great possession numbers to offensive contributions, while averaging more than 28 minutes of ice time per game, he is the total package. Not only is he mobile, but he's physically punishing, too.

07 | ANZE KOPITAR LOS ANGELES | C | LAST YEAR: 13

His first Selke Trophy was validation that the two-time Stanley Cup winner definitely deserved. Kopitar, now the Kings' captain, is not only a great defensive center, but he also still puts up top-15 offensive numbers and wins a ton of faceoffs. He is the type of center teams try to build around.

08 | ERIK KARLSSON OTTAWA | D | LAST YEAR: 7

If you need offense from the blueline, you go to the one-man breakout. Karlsson averaged a stunning 28 minutes per game and finished tied for fourth in NHL scoring, an incredible feat for a defenseman. The big question at this point: what would Karlsson be like on a team that had much more talent?

09 | CONNOR McDAVID EDMONTON | C | LAST YEAR: 36

We only have a 45-game sample at this point, but the die has been cast. McDavid could very well lead the NHL in scoring this season and no one would blink. He's got a nuclear option on his wing now with Milan Lucic and still plenty of other finesse guys to work with on the power play.

10 | JOE PAVELSKI SAN JOSE | C | LAST YEAR: 28

As captain, he led the Sharks to the Stanley Cup final for the first time in franchise history. During the regular season, he was an offensive machine and one of the best faceoff men in the NHL. He's a do-it-all guy and totally clutch, leading the league with 11 game-winning goals.

11 | ALEX OVECHKIN WASHINGTON | LW | LAST YEAR: 3

It's really hard to hit 50 goals nowadays, but 'Ovie' still hit the benchmark. Most impressively, he was the only NHLer to 30 even-strength goals (31). On top of that, he remains a physical force, making life hard on opposing defensemen with his heavy hits.

12 | PATRICE BERGERON BOSTON | C | LAST YEAR: 20

His Bruins are weakening around him, but Bergeron is still one of the premier two-way players in the NHL. He killed it in the faceoff circle and put up top-20 offensive numbers.

13 | TYLER SEGUIN DALLAS | C | LAST YEAR: 18

A point-per-game player whose season was cut short by injury, Seguin will be back with a vengeance. The magic he works with linemate Benn will help the Stars soar again.

14 | BRENT BURNS SAN JOSE | D | LAST YEAR: 44

Few defenders have the same impact on the game today as Burns, who rang up big offensive numbers, played huge minutes and contributed in all situations – all while playing physical.

15 | JOHN TAVARES NY ISLANDERS | C | LAST YEAR: 6

He has flirted with the Hart a couple times already. And thanks to his offensive acumen and possession game, Tavares could do it again. He makes players around him better.

16 | VICTOR HEDMAN TAMPA BAY | D | LAST YEAR: 10

Would it be surprising if Hedman won the Norris Trophy this season? It would not. The beastly Bolt drives possession, puts up points and plays tough competition.

17 | BRADEN HOLTBY WASHINGTON | G | LAST YEAR: 39

The Vezina winner checks all the boxes thanks to his size, technique and compete level. Holtby led the NHL in wins last year, and he's got the inside track on repeating the trick.

18 | EVGENI MALKIN PITTSBURGH | C | LAST YEAR: 27

It's weird for such a big talent to get overshadowed, but that's life with Crosby as your teammate. Malkin is still one of the most potent scorers in the NHL, averaging a point per game last year.

19 | JOHNNY GAUDREAU CALGARY | LW | LAST YEAR: NR

Fast becoming one of the most dangerous offensive players in the league, 'Johnny Hockey' faces top lines and still manages to get the puck going in the right direction on a bad possession team.

20 | VLADIMIR TARASENKO ST. LOUIS | RW | LAST YEAR: 21

Another world-class snipe artist, Tarasenko notched his first 40-goal campaign last season. But on a premier Blues squad, it certainly won't be his last. He has dazzling moves with the puck.

21 | RYAN GETZLAF ANAHEIM | C | LAST YEAR: 14

A possession driver who also happens to be a great playmaker, Getzlaf's challenge now is to get his second Cup ring – but this time, as the captain instead of a brash youth.

22 | STEVEN STAMKOS TAMPA BAY | C | LAST YEAR: 9

Losing out on him as a UFA caused at least two teams – Toronto and Detroit – to change their plans. Tampa Bay is thrilled to have him back. Few can score like Stamkos can.

23 | LOGAN COUTURE SAN JOSE | C | LAST YEAR: NR

Had the Sharks won the Cup, he would have been a very strong Conn Smythe candidate. Couture can pile up the points, but he's also a solid two-way player with good possession stats.

24 | KRIS LETANG PITTSBURGH | D | LAST YEAR: 31

Positively Herculean during the Pens' run to the title, Letang ate huge minutes (nearly 29 per game in the playoffs) and ranked second on the team in scoring during the regular season.

25 | BEN BISHOP TAMPA BAY | G | LAST YEAR: 47

It's unfortunate that Tampa will probably trade him or lose him to Las Vegas. The towering netminder has injury issues, but when he's on the ice he is nearly unbeatable.

TOP 50

26 | JONATHAN QUICK LOS ANGELES | G | LAST YEAR: NR
Still one of the most intimidating goalies around, Quick's athleticism and quickness are legendary.

27 | DUNCAN KEITH CHICAGO | D | LAST YEAR: 5
His combination of minute-munching and excellent two-way play makes him a beacon for all D-men.

28 | JOE THORNTON SAN JOSE | C | LAST YEAR: NR
'Jumbo' just turned in one of his finest seasons. How many more does he have? At least one or two.

29 | OLIVER EKMAN-LARSSON ARIZONA | D | LAST YEAR: 33
He doesn't get a lot of publicity, but he crushes minutes, plays against top lines and scores a lot.

30 | EVGENY KUZNETSOV WASHINGTON | C | LAST YEAR: NR
He'll eventually take over for 'Ovie' as the Caps' top offensive threat. And that could be coming soon.

31 | JOHN KLINGBERG DALLAS | D | LAST YEAR: NR
He puts up big points from the blueline and does it with great possession stats as well.

32 | CORY SCHNEIDER NEW JERSEY | G | LAST YEAR: NR
How many games would N.J. have won without him? Get him some goal support and he's a world-beater.

33 | NIKITA KUCHEROV TAMPA BAY | RW | LAST YEAR: NR
On a team with Stamkos, the top-scoring Triplet may be Tampa's most dangerous player.

34 | NICKLAS BACKSTROM WASHINGTON | C | LAST YEAR: 48
He's posted three straight seasons with 50 assists or more while playing tough minutes.

35 | CLAUDE GIROUX PHILADELPHIA | C | LAST YEAR: 18
He's a top-20 scorer with nice possession stats and some of the best faceoff work in the NHL.

36 | P.K. SUBBAN NASHVILLE | D | LAST YEAR: 22
There's risk to his game but also lots of reward. Subban plays tons of minutes and racks up points.

37 | ROMAN JOSI NASHVILLE | D
LAST YEAR: NR
He's an underrated star in Nashville who led the Predators in ice time and points by a defenseman.

38 | SHEA WEBER MONTREAL | D
LAST YEAR: 17
Weber is still an intimidator thanks to his physical play, cannon point shot and big workload.

39 | BLAKE WHEELER WINNIPEG | RW
LAST YEAR: NR
On a bad team, he ended up tied for sixth in NHL scoring while terrorizing opponents when he killed penalties.

40 | TAYLOR HALL NEW JERSEY | LW
LAST YEAR: NR
He was a huge possession driver in Edmonton, and the Devils will love his speed and skill.

41 | HAMPUS LINDHOLM ANAHEIM | C
LAST YEAR: NR
His possession numbers are, quite frankly, insane. He's a rising star in Anaheim.

42 | COREY CRAWFORD CHICAGO | G
LAST YEAR: NR
For all the talk about the crew that plays in front of him, Crawford still led the NHL in shutouts with seven.

43 | RYAN SUTER MINNESOTA | D
LAST YEAR: 23
Only Karlsson averaged more ice time per game, but Suter played more shorthanded – and he put up 51 points, too.

44 | ARTEMI PANARIN CHICAGO | LW
LAST YEAR: NR
He made magic with Kane. There will be no sophomore slump.

45 | BRAD MARCHAND BOSTON | LW
LAST YEAR: NR
His 31 combined even-strength and shorthanded goals tied for NHL lead.

46 | DUSTIN BYFUGLIEN WINNIPEG | D
LAST YEAR: NR
The big shot, the big minutes, the big dude: 'Big Buff' can alter a game.

47 | ALEX PIETRANGELO ST. LOUIS | D
LAST YEAR: NR
He goes about his work quietly but does so with deadly efficiency.

48 | ALEKSANDER BARKOV | FLORIDA | C | LAST YEAR: NR
He was early a point-per-game player in his third season. What will see from Barkov this time out?

49 | ONDREJ PALAT TAMPA BAY | LW | LAST YEAR: NR
The new Marian Hossa? Palat has crafted a smart, two-way game that allows for offense, as well.

50 | RYAN MCDONAGH NY RANGERS | D | LAST YEAR: 26
He did some heavy lifting on the Rangers' blueline and still found time to put up 34 points.

A couple unlucky injuries cut short a promising season for Gallagher, who was on pace to easily set career highs in goals, assists and points.

SMALL STATURE, BIG STATUS

Gallagher has always punched above his height. And that feistiness has served him well, elevating him from an afterthought in junior to a fixture now in the Canadiens' core BY PAT HICKEY

For the record, Brendan Gallagher stands a shade below his listed height of 5-foot-9. But calling him small doesn't insult him. He's used to that by now.

Besides, he's every bit as solid as his listing of 184 pounds would indicate. Add to that his fearless approach to the game and it's no surprise Gallagher has solidified himself as a top-six forward on the Montreal Canadiens over his first four seasons in the NHL. "Every team I've played on I've been the small guy," he said with his trademark grin. "It's reality."

On a team filled with undersized players, Gallagher plays big. Need a guy to battle along the boards? That's Gallagher. Need a guy to stand in front of the net during the power play? Gallagher again.

That's why Canadiens GM Marc Bergevin deviated from his normal game plan and signed Gallagher to a six-year extension nearly two years ago when he was still on his entry-level deal. And that's why the Canadiens officially added the 24-year-old to their leadership core by giving him an 'A' for the front of his jersey.

Gallagher is a player in the mold of Brad Marchand – a pest who can also score – and he has won a grudging respect from fellow agitators around the league. When Andrew Shaw was acquired from the Chicago Blackhawks during the summer, he was quickly compared to Gallagher. "We've had our battles over the years, and I'm looking forward to playing with him," Shaw said. "He's a competitor, a winner."

Gallagher gets under the skin of opposing players because when he gets checked, he bounces right back up, often with a smile on his face. And he never gives them the satisfaction of knowing they've knocked him off his game, though he openly takes joy in knocking them off theirs, even when he has to pay a price for it. And he has done that often, being among the NHL leaders in goalie interference penalties. "I'm starting to learn what I can do and what I can't do," Gallagher said. "Every referee has a different way of calling a game. I try to talk to them, and they let me know when I'm crossing the line."

Gallagher, the Canadiens' 2010 fifth-round draft choice, attracted attention at the team's 2011 training camp, appearing in five exhibition games. Everybody played better with the feisty Gallagher on the wing, which impressed the team. But the conservative Canadiens management felt he was too young, so they waited until he had a so-so game in his fifth appearance and sent him back for a fourth year of junior.

The following season, after the lockout, Gallagher made the NHL roster and forged a friendship with fellow rookie Alex Galchenyuk that continues today, though the two initially did have an issue over the nickname 'Gally,' which they had both been called in the past. "I had it first," Gallagher said. "So I got to keep it."

Galchenyuk became 'Chucky," instead.

Gallagher delights in proving doubters wrong. A successful junior career started inauspiciously when the Vancouver Giants selected him in the ninth round of the WHL bantam draft in 2007. It's not as if the Giants didn't have a good line on Gallagher, though. His father, Ian, is the team's strength coach, and young Brendan visited Giants practices regularly. "I was always hanging around the rink, but I don't know if my father wanted the Giants to draft me," Gallagher said. "That first season was good for me, because (coach Don Hay) used me in every possible situation. I learned a lot that season."

When Gallagher signed his extension with Montreal in November 2014, the consensus was that the Canadiens had made a good deal with his $3.75 cap hit. But there were those who wondered whether Gallagher's style of play would survive another six years in the NHL. Gallagher remained healthy, missing only four games in his rookie season with a concussion, until he was injured twice last season. But both injuries were freakish.

He sustained two broken fingers when he stopped a Johnny Boychuk slapshot, costing him 17 games when the Canadiens were reeling from the loss of Carey Price. He returned for the Winter Classic on New Year's Day and scored a goal as Montreal beat Boston for one of the few bright spots in a dreadful second half for the Habs. He also missed 12 games when he twisted his knee, but he recovered in time to help Team Canada win a gold medal at the World Championship, a feeling he hopes carries over into 2016-17. "Last season was the first I had missed the playoffs," Gallagher said. "It was good to go to the worlds and have something to build on next season." H

WE'VE HAD OUR BATTLES OVER THE YEARS, AND I'M LOOKING FORWARD TO PLAYING WITH HIM. HE'S A COMPETITOR, A WINNER

JUMBO JOE STILL LOOMS LARGE

Thornton is 'weird' – and a refreshing throwback to the days when star players knew they were special and weren't afraid to say so

BY KEN CAMPBELL

REASON NO. 8,571 why it's so freakin' sweet to be an NHL player: they get into the Hockey Hall of Fame for free. We know that because Joe Thornton dropped that nugget on us the day before the Stanley Cup final. You probably have to show some kind of card, but we're thinking these days Thornton would be able to just show up and walk in. So that means 'Jumbo' saves a cool 48 bucks each time he visits with his wife and two kids. The savings will rocket up to $60 next year when his son, River, turns four and otherwise would be subject to the $12 youth entry fee. Thornton can take the hit, considering he will have made $96,675,000 in career earnings when his contract with the San Jose Sharks expires after this season. "I would pay," Thornton said about his Hall visits, "but they give it to us for free."

The debate on whether or not Thornton deserves to be a permanent fixture in the Hall of Fame is reserved for another day. (Are you kidding? Of course he deserves it. Just look at his numbers.) It's certainly not a debate into which Thornton is going to allow himself to be dragged. "I've always been really good at staying in the moment my whole career," he said. "I just stay within myself."

That's the Joe Thornton much of the hockey establishment wants, the one who stays in the moment, stays within himself. The way Connor McDavid and Sidney Crosby and Jonathan Toews do. Have you ever noticed that as players get younger and more wildly talented, the way they portray themselves publicly is inversely proportional? Whatever happened to the days when kids came into the NHL with as much personality as talent, or in Alexander Daigle's case, more personality than talent? Where are the Chris Prongers, the Jeff O'Neills, the Jaromir Jagrs?

They're falling by the wayside like slow-footed defensemen. Thankfully, Thornton refuses to succumb. He has been traded, had the captaincy stripped of him, been burned by a media member who published an exchange that was clearly off the record, yet Thornton carries on, true to himself. "What he should do is just shut up," John Tortorella once said of Thornton. "Joe hasn't won a goddamn thing in this league. He could go down as one of the better players in our league never to win anything."

Tortorella said those words almost five years ago now, and sadly Thornton still hasn't won the biggest prize in the game. He came close but got shut down in a Stanley Cup final that was hardly an oil painting. It was tough not to cheer for Thornton through last spring's Stanley Cup run – a player who is a throwback in more ways than one. He speaks what's on his mind. In an era in which the hockey world seems obsessed with possessing the puck for as long as possible, Thornton still thinks it's best to give it to someone else. But it's the candor you love about him. With his team two games away from getting to the Stanley Cup final, he came up with this: "I know I'm a great player." Then on media day before the final began, he spoke of the pressure he faced to take full advantage of the biggest chance in his career to win a Stanley Cup: "Yeah, really, if you know me, it doesn't affect me. I know it. I know I'm a great player. I'm really good. I'll tell you that all day."

Thornton's body of work tells you he's absolutely right. According to Elias Sports Bureau, only 13 players in NHL history have averaged a point per game in a season when they were older than Thornton was 2015-16. The only three who aren't in the Hall of Fame are Daniel Alfredsson, Martin St-Louis and Phil Goyette, but Alfredsson and St-Louis should be taken care of in 2017 and 2018, respectively. So, yes, Thornton is a great player. All the great ones know they are, which is part of what makes them great when they're at the height of the powers and a tad diluted when everyone but them seems to recognize the game has passed them by. But when was the last time you heard a hockey player declare himself great? And the thing was, when Thornton said it, he wasn't making any bold proclamations. It was as though he was stating an obvious truth, such as hockey is played on frozen water.

It's because there's perhaps no player in the game today more comfortable in his own skin than Thornton. And the reason for that goes way back to the small city in southwestern Ontario where he grew up.

Jumbo the Circus Elephant died in St. Thomas, Ont., when a locomotive hit him in 1885. Ninety-four years later, Jumbo the Hockey Player was born in St. Thomas to Wayne and Mary Thornton. Wayne worked at the tire factory that supplied the Ford assembly line in town and Mary worked as a secretary. By the time he was 14, Joe was playing Jr. B hockey, and by 15 he was the most dominant player in a league where he played against players three and four years older. "It just goes back to Mom and Dad, that's where it comes from," said Thornton's older brother and agent, John. "He's been himself. Even in Boston, he had the smile and enjoyed hockey, and he didn't let other guys get him down. Plenty of people have tried to get Joe down in his career."

Thornton's tenure in Boston was a rollercoaster of ups and downs. In his first year in the league, as an 18-year-old, he was completely out of his element, a frequent healthy scratch who largely saw fourth-line duty and played just eight minutes a game. One story goes that during a practice that season, coach Pat Burns was explaining a drill to the team, then looked to Thornton and said, "This drill is only for guys who are committed, so just go over in the corner." (The interesting thing is that Thornton looks back at hard-ass coaches such as Burns and Mike Keenan as some of the most positive influences on his career.) It didn't help that in that season, fellow rookie Sergei Samsonov, who was taken seven picks after Thornton, played 15 minutes a game and scored 47 points en route to winning the Calder Trophy.

HE WAS A REALLY DIFFERENT KID. HE NEVER WANTED ANYTHING. HE NEVER WANTED TOYS, HE NEVER WANTED CHRISTMAS PRESENTS. HE'S JUST A WEIRD GUY

– John Thornton, Joe's brother

Six-and-a-half seasons later, Thornton was dealt to the Sharks and became the first player in NHL history to win the Hart Trophy after being traded mid-season. It was a deal that irrevocably altered both franchises. It gave the Bruins the salary cap space to sign Zdeno Chara, and they won the Stanley Cup five years after dealing Thornton. The Sharks got a generational talent at the height of his talents, a player who would go on to lead the league in assists three straight seasons and make a 50-goal scorer out of Jonathan Cheechoo. The local critics haven't been nearly as harsh in San Jose, but pundits around the league seem to still have strong opinions. Most of them are based on the fact that prior to this year's final, Thornton had played 150 playoff games without appearing in the fourth round and much of the Sharks' well-documented playoff failures fell at his feet. Then came losing the captaincy, which may not seem like a huge deal, until you realize the symbolic importance attached to being a captain of an NHL team.

MARCHING TO HIS OWN BEAT

An NHL captaincy carries with it far more than just the responsibility for being the team's on-ice advocate with the officials. It's also a statement about a player's character and his ability to back words with actions. Captains are usually voted on by teammates, and by electing a teammate captain, those players are telling the world they stand behind the man wearing the 'C', that he represents everything they are about. And that was all taken away when the management and coaching staff made the change. This is something that almost never ends well. But after a very public airing of their differences, with Thornton at one point saying that GM Doug Wilson, "should just shut his mouth," it hasn't been an issue since. "I think I was upset for maybe a day or two," Thornton said. "It's so long ago, but you get over things quick, you've got to. And once that happened, a lot of my ex-teammates, former teammates, coaches, they all sent great texts and phoned me. If you know me, it really wasn't a big deal."

It helps that Sharks coach Peter DeBoer, who took over for Todd McLellan prior to last season, includes Thornton as part of a leadership group with the Sharks. Clearly, DeBoer has assuaged any hard feelings, if there ever were any in the first place. So Thornton doesn't wear the 'C' anymore. But DeBoer makes it clear that does not keep him from having a prominent part of the team's dynamic. "One of the greatest leaders I've been around, hands down," DeBoer gushed during the Stanley Cup final. "I'm not talking just teams I've coached in the regular season in the NHL. I've coached World Championship and world junior teams. He's an unbelievable combination of professionalism and work ethic, and has a great, casual, relaxed way around the dressing room where he makes everybody feel included. This guy is a fantastic leader."

It is that ability to be inclusive that has become part of the Thornton lore. Whether it's looking out for the members of the training staff or trying to convince media relations guys to stay in the organization instead of taking a job elsewhere, it is all about the team for Thornton. So it should come as no surprise that Thornton is so quick to pass the puck. At his best, he is a selfless player. The guy is 6-foot-4 and 220 pounds. You don't think he could do some damage if he drove the net? He'd probably score a few more goals, but he believes his team is better off with him making sublime passes and creating even more scoring chances. To hear his brother tell it, there's not a lot of selfishness there. "Joe sees the game a lot different than the rest of us," John Thornton said. "Corsi measures shots, yet Joe creates more than anybody else without shooting. People have never understood that. Joe sees the game a little differently, and I think my parents just taught him to see life a little differently, too."

Now that's interesting. And it was something John noticed about his brother from a very early age, both on and off the ice: "He was a really different kid. Like he never wanted anything. He never wanted toys, he never wanted Christmas presents. He's just a weird guy."

But good weird. One story has it that Thornton prompted the Sharks to issue each player a bathrobe for post-game interviews after seeing Thornton's preponderance for often doing them au naturel. Even now, he often does his interviews barechested, which you don't see very often. But he's not an entirely open book. During the final, one of the Sharks mentioned Thornton is good friends with Gord Downie, the lead singer of The Tragically Hip, who was diagnosed with an incurable form of brain cancer in May of 2016. When one inquisitor managed to get him alone for a moment during the final to talk about it, he was quickly shut down when Thornton bluntly said, "I'm not talking about that," all the while with a smile on his face but also a tone that suggested it was a subject not open to discussion.

It will be interesting to see where Thornton's career goes after this season. He'll be 38 and a pending UFA next summer, but his play suggests there's still some jump in his game. When Thornton signed his current deal with San Jose two years ago, it was done in conjunction with Patrick Marleau. It was important to Thornton that the organization was committed to both him and Marleau, the player drafted right after him in 1997. It's difficult to think both will be back with the Sharks in 2017-18, but that's still a full year away. "Like I said before, I don't worry about too much," Thornton said. "I just go day by day. I'm going to play as long as I can because I love coming to the rink. I do love the guys. I like the fellowship. I just like everything about it. I'm just really passionate about the game of hockey. It's all I know and I love it."

JOE THORNTON

It seems Thornton intends on being around for a while. He might be one of those players who, a couple years down the road, will need to be told by every team in the league that he can no longer play. Or perhaps he'll realize it one day himself when he can no longer live up to his own standard. For now, Thornton not only loves playing but actually likes the burn of the offseason preparation it takes to be an NHL player. And that's usually the first thing that goes. So let's enjoy it while it lasts. H

Eichel's transition from college to the NHL was made a lot easier by the hospitality of the Moulsons, who welcomed him into their home. But Eichel will be on his own this season. Well, kinda. He's rooming with fellow sophomore Sam Reinhart.

THE KID GLOVES ARE OFF

A rookie no more, Eichel looks to go from starstruck freshman to superstar sophomore, though he'll need to learn how to cook first

BY JASON BUCKLAND

The moment came just two games into the phenom's pro career.

Whoa, the 18-year-old thought. This is the NHL.

Nearly nine minutes into the third period, on his new home ice inside Buffalo's First Niagara Center, Jack Eichel skated along the right hip of Steven Stamkos, the Lightning star who was gliding, almost passively, toward the net. Just then, he struck. With Eichel only inches to his rear, Stamkos accelerated suddenly, shuffle-stepping left in front of the goal, where a Ryan Callahan pass from behind the crease found his stick. Crisp. Fast. Lethal. Before Eichel could scarcely move, the puck was in the back of the net.

Whoa. This is the NHL.

Eichel skated from the ice that afternoon, a 4-1 loss, one of many Sabres shortcomings during his debut season in professional hockey, certain Tampa Bay was the best team he'd ever played. That Stamkos, whom Eichel had grown up watching on TV, scored on him made the game no less surreal. "It was kind of an eye-opening moment for me," Eichel, now 19, said. "I was kind of in awe out there."

In the NHL, as in life, there is no substitute for experience. And yet, no matter that Stamkos and the Lightning ate his lunch right out of the gate, Eichel did a fine job last season making himself appear like an old pro.

Nabbed by Buffalo with the No. 2 pick in the 2015 draft, Eichel was immediately cast in an impossible role: he was the GTAM, the Guy Taken After McDavid. But Eichel, despite considerably less hype than the Oilers' coveted young center, projected as a star in his own right.

Born in North Chelmsford, Mass., some 28 miles northwest of downtown Boston, Eichel excelled at every level before the pros. He was a U.S. NTDP leader who dropped 71 points in 40 games in 2014-15 at Boston University, where as a freshman he won the Hobey Baker Award, given to the nation's top college player. Eichel found himself in good company: since the prize was first given in 1981, the only other freshman to be so awarded was Paul Kariya, in 1993.

After one year in college, Eichel bolted for the NHL, where he joined a talent-poor Sabres team projected to stay near the league's basement again. Buffalo did, winning just 35 games and finishing seventh in the Atlantic Division, though Eichel provided his part.

North Chelmsford's unofficial motto, found on signs and bumper stickers across town, is "Don't Tread on Me," and indeed Eichel quickly established he belongs in the NHL. He missed only one game all season, felled with the flu in March, and put up 56 points, good for second among all rookies. More than that, those points, which included 24 goals, were also second-highest on the Sabres. If it weren't already known, it was made clear last season: Buffalo's future will be tied to the fate of its rising young star.

Eichel's transition from precocious teen to reliable pro began shortly after he was drafted. However, it came not through an on-ice drill or a sit-down with Buffalo brass – rather, an extended hand from a team veteran. Early in the summer, Matt Moulson, then an eight-year pro with four NHL teams on his resume, reached out to Eichel to offer his home to the new draftee for his rookie season.

The decision came easy. Moulson was well-liked on the Sabres roster and he had successfully brought along another prized rookie once before, hosting John Tavares for his debut season in 2009-10, when Moulson was with the New York Islanders.

I COULDN'T HAVE HAD MORE FUN LIVING AT THEIR HOUSE. FOR THEM TO TAKE ME IN AND DO EVERYTHING FOR ME OUT OF THE GOODNESS OF THEIR HEARTS SHOWS WHAT KIND OF PEOPLE THEY ARE

So Eichel moved to Moulson's home in East Amherst, a hamlet outside Buffalo. There, he almost assumed the role of third child to Moulson and his wife, Alicia, who already had two young kids, daughter Mila and son George. Eichel relished in the home-cooked meals crafted by Alicia. While Mila and George ate in their high chairs, Alicia often watched nearby in a seat by the kitchen bar. Eichel and Moulson sat next to each other across the room, many nights with the TV on while they chowed down. "I couldn't have had more fun living at their house," Eichel said. "For them to take me in and do everything for me out of the goodness of their hearts shows what kind of people they are."

If, by living with Moulson and his family during his rookie year, Eichel was brought along as a pro in a safety bubble, he could not escape the realities of the NHL lifestyle the other half of the year, when his team hit the road.

The season's length, the travel and the hotels were all largely new to the teen, though Eichel came to embrace the perks of being a budding NHL star. He roomed with teammate Sam Reinhart in every city throughout the year, the comforts and luxuries of each town's finest lodging not lost on him.

He took nothing for granted. Eichel enjoyed shopping in some of the finest stores and boutiques across the continent, and meals out at tony restaurants like Beauty & Essex in Manhattan's Lower East Side or Mastro's Ocean Club in Newport Beach were thrills he did not dismiss.

Of course, there was still hockey to be played, and no matter how high a draft pick you are, the first run through a full NHL season is an exercise in stamina no new player makes it through unscathed. "It's your rookie season," Eichel said. "You play 82 games. You definitely hit a few walls."

When he hit them, in the middle of the year and again, by Eichel's account, toward the end of the season, it was a mental hurdle he leaned on physical repetition to clear. If he went a stretch without scoring – "You're used to that, your entire career, scoring goals," said Eichel, who had two seven-game runs last season without putting one in the net – there would be Eichel after practice, still on the ice for an hour working his way through the motions. "When I did that," he said, "I found results. That's a good feeling."

He finished the season strong, with a point in each of his last five games, and now the real work ahead of Year 2 has begun. The bitter taste of a sunk Sabres season in his mouth, Eichel has ramped up his training and diet regiment, working out near Boston with famed strength and conditioning coach Brian McDonough, who has helped sculpt more than 180 pro athletes in the NHL, NFL and AHL. Eichel has been back on the ice since June, and morning smoothies have been followed often by lean lunches and dinners of fish, brown rice and vegetables.

Leisure time will come. Eichel spent Fourth of July in Nantucket, the beach-lined island off Cape Cod, and had planned a fishing trip north of Massachusetts with his father, Bob. Yet Eichel knows he must be accountable for the load the Sabres will place on him when he returns to western New York, this time not with Moulson and family but in a newly finished three-storey townhouse, which he will share with Reinhart.

His rookie season is over. For Buffalo, a long-struggling franchise looking toward Eichel for relief, so, too, are his rookie expectations. H

NHL TEAM REPORTS

Led by Steven Stamkos, the Tampa Bay Lightning will once again hoist Lord Stanley's Cup this season.

MIKE CARLSON/GETTY IMAGES

LIGHTNING WILL STRIKE SILVER

Ten teams can lay a legitimate claim to the 2017 Stanley Cup, but with unmatched depth and skill, it's Tampa Bay's turn

BY RYAN KENNEDY

IT'S STUNNING TO think how close the Tampa Bay Lightning came to the Stanley Cup final last year, given how much turmoil ensnared the team. The franchise endured twin dramas during the season, first surrounding the pending unrestricted free agency of captain Steven Stamkos, then the protest of young Jonathan Drouin, followed by the suspension of Drouin and, eventually, the return of Drouin.

That's more high drama than most NHL franchises deal with in a year, but then there were the injuries, too. Stamkos was felled by a blood clot, while once again star goalie Ben Bishop got hurt during the playoffs. But even that didn't stop the Bolts from pushing Pittsburgh to the brink in the Eastern Conference final. With Andrei Vasilevskiy playing ably in Bishop's place, Tampa held a 3-2 series lead but couldn't hang on, even with Stamkos returning dramatically for Game 7.

But now the Lightning have a clean slate. Stamkos is re-signed, Drouin's snit long forgotten. Bishop is healthy and, even if he is lost again to injury or even traded, Vasilevskiy can hold down the fort. Tampa Bay has incredible depth and a legit Norris Trophy candidate in Victor Hedman, on top of all the previously mentioned goodies. Which is why the Lightning will win the Stanley Cup in 2016-17.

There's a certain amount of magic to consider here. Is it not kismet that two legendary Lightning players from the franchise's first Cup – Vincent Lecavalier and Brad Richards – just retired? And is there any reason not to believe Tampa can once again walk out of the Atlantic Division, where they could face any number of Metro foes in the conference final? The odds are favorable here. Bet on the Bolts.

Out West, another one-time Cup winner will rise again in Dallas. The Stars have already proven their regular season chops of late and did make a bit of a run in the playoffs, though goaltending let them down. Dallas is still running with the oddly expensive tandem of Kari Lehtonen and Antti Niemi, but keep in mind: if GM Jim Nill needs to pull the trigger and find a new No. 1, this season will be uniquely shaped to do so. The pending Vegas expansion draft could see names such as Marc-Andre Fleury or Bishop hit the trade market (and what about Henrik Lundqvist if the Rangers seek a rebuild?), bringing at least some return for their teams instead of losing the stars for nothing. Imagine a Cup final where Bishop is in net for Dallas – facing Tampa Bay.

While summer brings hope for all, there will be a smaller pool of contenders overall. Washington will be dangerous again, as will whichever California team makes it out of the feeding frenzy that is the top of the Pacific Division. The Central will also be a buzzsaw, with the dynastic Blackhawks not even earning playoffs home-ice advantage.

Oh, and Pittsburgh is pretty much the exact same team that went all Speedy Gonzales on the field en route to the Cup last year. Except this time Trevor Daley won't be hurt for the final.

And as you'll see by the Stanley Cup odds in each preview, it wouldn't be surprising to see any one of 10 teams win it all: Tampa (8/1), Dallas (9/1), Pittsburgh (10/1), Washington (12/1), Anaheim (13/1), Chicago (14/1), Los Angeles (15/1), San Jose (16/1), Nashville (17/1) or St. Louis (18/1).

In the following section, you will find our exhaustive preview of all 30 NHL teams via our correspondent in each market. We're getting down and dirty as always, from depth charts and Future Watch rankings to an all-over prognosis on how your team appears for 2016-17. One change in our 2015-16 stats wrap to keep an eye on: in the age of constantly evolving advanced statistics, we're attempting to keep pace by using a new metric for excellence this time. Score/Venue Adjusted 5-on-5 Corsi, via corsica.hockey, is our current gold standard of possession stats, taking into account not only how close a game is, but also whether the team is at home or on the road and how that factors in. The hope, as always, is to get the cleanest number by factoring in situations that could add noise to the equation.

Now it's just time to play the games and see how everything shakes out. Will Tampa Bay hoist the Cup for the first time since 2004? Can Dallas challenge the Lightning by getting back to the final for the first since they reached in back-to-back years in 1999 and 2000? And how will a team that won't even be on the schedule (Las Vegas) affect everyone else? It's going to be a fun one, for sure.

STANLEY CUP ODDS /// 13-1

BY ERIC STEPHENS

Four playoffs failures in a row were enough. Four straight Game 7 losses at home were just too much. Someone had to pay.

Exit Bruce Boudreau, who lost his job as coach for the inability of the Anaheim Ducks to finish teams off. The most painful was the loss to the Chicago Blackhawks in the 2015 Western Conference final. The final straw was their most recent post-season faceplant – a first-round defeat to the Nashville Predators in April.

Instead of bringing in a trendy young coach, GM Bob Murray re-hired Randy Carlyle – the same bench boss he fired in the fall of 2011 and replaced with Boudreau, four years after Carlyle had coached the Ducks to their only Stanley Cup in 2007. His task is daunting: push Anaheim to another Cup before the window closes. Second coaching stints are rarely as good as the first. The Ducks and Carlyle are out to prove otherwise.

OFFENSE If the Ducks didn't already rely too much on the big three of Ryan Getzlaf, Corey Perry and Ryan Kesler, now they'll be leaning on them even more. Carlyle has shown the ability to get big seasons from his top players, and he'll need to again. David Perron, Jamie McGinn, Brandon Pirri, Chris Stewart, Shawn Horcoff and Mike Santorelli were all allowed to walk, and the only skill Murray has added to the forward group is Mason Raymond, who ended last season in the AHL. Rickard Rakell and Jakob Silfverberg must duplicate their 20-goal seasons and Andrew Cogliano has to produce more. Without much secondary scoring, Carlyle will need to squeeze as much as he can out of what he has.

DEFENSE There isn't a clear No. 1 in the group, but this solid cast allowed the fewest goals last season. Hampus Lindholm may be the Ducks' best all-around defender while Sami Vatanen remains their top producer. Kevin Bieksa will need to improve from an up-and-down first season in Anaheim, while Josh Manson is trending upward after a solid sophomore year. Simon Despres returns after a concussion-plagued year. Speculation surrounded Cam Fowler's future because of Anaheim's depth on defense and the need for help up front.

GOALTENDING The net is all John Gibson's now after Frederik Andersen was traded to Toronto. Gibson had a 2.07 goals-against average in 38 starts last season, but his 53 games between Anaheim and the AHL's San Diego Gulls were his most in a pro season. The Ducks needed a veteran who can play 25 games behind him, which is why they acquired Jonathan Bernier in a separate deal with Toronto.

SPECIAL TEAMS Retaining assistants Paul MacLean and Trent Yawney will keep some needed continuity for two highly successful units. For the first time since the New York Islanders did it in 1985, the Ducks led the NHL in both special teams. Carlyle's clubs always spend a lot of time in the sin bin, so penalty kill efficiency is a must.

INTANGIBLES After five years of the player-friendly Boudreau, the Ducks will have to adjust to the demanding Carlyle. Not only do Getzlaf, Perry, Fowler and Cogliano know what he's like, having played for him during his first rodeo in Anaheim, but Kesler and Bieksa also played for Carlyle when he coached Vancouver's AHL team. The urgency to win mounts after another playoff disappointment and as Getzlaf and Perry slowly descend from their primes.

ROOKIES Shea Theodore may not have a regular job out of the gate, but he will if Fowler is moved. Talented 'D' prospect Brandon Montour isn't far behind and should get a call-up. Nick Ritchie has taken the team's mandate to get into better shape and has a great chance at landing a spot.

X-FACTOR How much Carlyle gets out of Getzlaf and Perry, as the pair turn 32 in the spring, will determine how the club fares in the regular season and beyond. Getzlaf put up subpar numbers while Perry didn't score in the playoffs and was left off Canada's World Cup squad. The two have faced the criticism of the team's inability to win decisive playoff games, and they should have renewed motivation under Carlyle.

THE BRASS Going back to Carlyle as coach – in an attempt to prod this team over the top – will be a defining moment in Murray's tenure as Ducks GM. That said, with Anaheim's lack of activity this summer, it's uncertain if Murray is truly being given the resources to make a run at what's become an elusive Stanley Cup championship.

ACQUIRED From Ott, July 2013 NHL '17-18

2016 NO. 1 DRAFT PICK

POSITION

SELECTED

LONDON KNIGHTS

SCOUTING REPORT
A powerful athlete with a mean streak, Jones has scoring punch as well. Though he can sometimes cross the line with his physicality, the Knights winger fits perfectly with the heavy Ducks organization.

ARIZONA COYOTES

BY SARAH MCLELLAN

Despite extending their playoff drought four seasons, the Arizona Coyotes enjoyed a successful start to their rebuild in 2015-16. They added youth to their roster, and the likes of Max Domi and Anthony Duclair impressed with their skill and speed – a change that seemed to revitalize the entire franchise and suggests even more youngsters will join the mix soon.

But the enthusiasm of the rookies wasn't enough to keep Arizona in contention, as a strong first half fizzled after the All-Star Game break. The goaltending was inconsistent amid injuries, and the blueline remained a work in progress, even with Oliver Ekman-Larsson's continued emergence as one of the game's elite defensemen. Building off the positives is a priority, and after reorganizing their management structure, the Coyotes were active in the summer, retooling their lineup with the hope they can keep improving in Year 2 of the process.

OFFENSE Not only did the rookies provide a boost – Domi and Duclair combined for 38 goals – but captain Shane Doan was also a major catalyst, leading the team in goals with 28. Even so, the Coyotes still scored the third-fewest goals in the Western Conference. Arizona signed winger Jamie McGinn to a three-year contract to complement the youngsters up front. The team also acquired Ryan White, a versatile depth option who could center the fourth line or work as a right winger. And it's likely the team graduates more promising prospects to the NHL with centers Dylan Strome and Christian Dvorak expected to seriously contend for jobs.

DEFENSE The back end required the most attention during the off-season, as the Coyotes worked to address a defense that was one of the NHL's worst in 2015-16. They immediately upgraded their look by signing Alex Goligoski to a five-year deal less than a week after acquiring his negotiating rights from the Dallas Stars. Goligoski, a left shot, will anchor the second pairing but could line up next to Ekman-Larsson in certain situations. For added depth, Arizona re-signed Kevin Connauton, Klas Dahlbeck and Jarred Tinordi, and inked Luke Schenn and Jamie McBain. The Coyotes also targeted the position at the draft, using four of five picks on defensemen.

SHANE DOAN

GOALTENDING A core muscle injury that required surgery sidelined No. 1 Mike Smith for approximately three months, but he was steady upon his return in March, an encouraging sign for the Coyotes. While Smith was on the mend, Louis Domingue shifted into a backup role before eventually playing his way into the starting job. His performance solidified his spot in the NHL as the team signed him to a two-year contract in the off-season.

SPECIAL TEAMS After Keith Yandle was traded, Arizona's power play regressed. Ekman-Larsson was still productive, but his partner on the blueline routinely changed and the team gave up 14 shorthanded goals – second most in the NHL. Domi and Duclair will benefit from the experience they gained as rookies, while McGinn and Goligoski have the potential to help. As for the penalty kill, Boyd Gordon and Nicklas Grossmann were brought in a year ago to shore it up, but it remained among the worst in the league. A healthy Smith will help, as will the changes made on defense.

INTANGIBLES The results of a much-needed shift to a youthful lineup were far-reaching. The move sparked a 22-point jump in the standings and offered hope for the future and validation of the franchise's new direction. Continuing that momentum won't be easy, though.

ROOKIES Considering Domi and Duclair made an impact in their rookie seasons, the Coyotes might be confident other up-and-comers can have similar transitions. Prolific OHL point producers Strome and Dvorak are the prospects with the best chances of making the team.

X-FACTOR Although the Coyotes' young goal scorers are intriguing, a tighter defense will be key to improvement. Time will tell if the changes made to the blueline will yield better play, but Smith's performance will be an important barometer of Arizona's potential.

THE BRASS This will be the first season for a new-look management tasked with successfully completing the rebuild. John Chayka is GM, replacing Don Maloney, who was fired in April. And coach Dave Tippett has taken on an expanded role as executive vice-president of hockey operations.

FUTURE WATCH

1 DYLAN STROME, C
AGE 19 TEAM Erie (OHL)
Great offensive instincts and creativity. Only issue is how far along is physical maturity.
ACQUIRED 3rd overall, 2015 NHL '16-17

2 CHRISTIAN DVORAK, C
AGE 20 TEAM London (OHL)
Second-round gem plays a versatile game and is terrific at both ends of the ice.
ACQUIRED 58th overall, 2014 NHL '16-17

3 CLAYTON KELLER, C
AGE 18 TEAM U.S. NTDP (USHL)
Small pivot was one of the most skilled players available in draft. Bound for Boston University.

4 JAKOB CHYCHRUN, D
AGE 18 TEAM Sarnia (OHL)
Two-way, reliable blueliner was once No. 2-rated prospect in draft. Game still evolving.

5 ANTHONY DEANGELO, D
AGE 20 TEAM Syracuse (AHL)
Offensive D-man needs to take on accountability in his own end. A work in progress.
ACQUIRED From TB, June, 2016 NHL '18-19

6 BRENDAN PERLINI, LW
AGE 20 TEAM Niagara (OHL)
Stats have tailed off in two seasons since draft. Future third-liner needs AHL seasoning.

7 NICK MERKLEY, RW
AGE 19 TEAM Kelowna (WHL)
Injuries may be due to competitive style. Plays a hungry game with deceptive skill.

8 RYAN MACINNIS, C
AGE 20 TEAM Kitchener (OHL)
Son of Hall of Famer Al plays a heady, responsible game and has a pro-style frame.

9 CHRISTIAN FISCHER, RW
AGE 19 TEAM Windsor (OHL)
Still working on foot speed, but likes to stay involved and is strong around the crease.
ACQUIRED 32nd overall, 2015 NHL '18-19

10 CONOR GARLAND, RW
AGE 20 TEAM Moncton (QMJHL)
Undersized forward not naturally fleet of foot, but has tremendous offensive instincts.

PATRICE BERGERON

PREDICTION

4TH in ATLANTIC

BY MIKE LOFTUS

Too much subtraction made it impossible for the Boston Bruins to make gains in 2015-16. Stripped, primarily for salary cap reasons, of six full-time players from 2014-15 (including four of their top seven scorers), first-year GM Don Sweeney was unable to add enough for a return to the playoffs. For the second straight year, the Bruins were denied a berth on the season's final day.

Roster reduction this summer wasn't as drastic. Loui Eriksson's departure via free agency was answered with the addition of former Blues captain David Backes, and the buyout of Dennis Seidenberg was mitigated on the blueline, short term, with trade deadline acquisition John-Michael Liles. But while the roster has been somewhat stabilized and salary cap flexibility achieved, there's little opinion that the Bruins actually improved. A third straight tooth-and-nail fight for a playoff spot looms.

OFFENSE Despite losing so many offensive leaders, the Bruins made a 27-goal improvement last season. Three players cracked the 30-goal mark while four reached 60 points. A year earlier, Bergeron was the only Bruin to reach 50 points. With Bergeron, David Krejci and either Ryan Spooner or Backes, center is a major strength. The key is finding scoring wingers – especially with Eriksson gone. Spooner or Backes may move to wing, where Boston hopes for a full season from 20-year-old David Pastrnak, who played only 51 games last season but scored 15 goals. The B's can count on roughly 40 points apiece from Zdeno Chara and Torey Krug.

DEFENSE Cracks have expanded with the trades of Johnny Boychuk and Dougie Hamilton. As a result, the Bruins fell from No. 2 in goals allowed to 19th. Chara, 39, needs a proven shutdown partner, with Seidenberg no longer an option. Physical, fearless holdovers Adam McQuaid and Kevan Miller have seen occasional top-pairing duty but haven't nailed the assignment down, while the smaller Krug and Liles are counted on for transition and puck movement. Part-timers Colin Miller and Joe Morrow are in line for more opportunity. Things would be worse if not for the presence of three-time Selke winner Bergeron and Krejci, also a strong two-way center. Backes, whether at wing or as the No. 3 center, brings a strong 200-foot game.

GOALTENDING The dwindling D-corps, a tweak in coach Claude Julien's system and undependable backup goaltending have left Tuukka Rask overworked and performing below his Vezina Trophy level of 2013-14, when he played 58 games. He made 70 appearances in 2014-15 and 64 last season, in which his goals-against average (2.56) and save percentage (.915) were middling. Boston reacquired Anton Khudobin, Rask's backup in 2013, hoping he'll lighten the load. He'll be the team's fourth No. 2 goalie in as many seasons.

SPECIAL TEAMS A reconfigured power play (minus Chara, who was joined by Marchand on the second group) improved, with Bergeron, Krug and Krejci leading the way. Eriksson's 10 power play goals must be replaced. The penalty killers, though in a state of flux without the departed Daniel Paille-Gregory Campbell tandem, performed well, with Chara, McQuaid and Kevan Miller doing the dirty work on the back end. The Bergeron-Marchand combo is among the league's best, with Marchand tied for third in shorthanded scoring.

INTANGIBLES Chara, Bergeron and Krejci form top-tier leadership, and Backes adds even more veteran guidance. With the Bruins needing young players to step into lineup holes, younger leaders are also called for. Marchand (28) and Krug (25) are the top candidates.

ROOKIES Pure rookies will be tough to find, but the Bruins hope Colin Miller (42 NHL games in 2015-16), Seth Griffith and Frank Vatrano can contribute full time. Griffith was second in the AHL with 77 points in 57 games, while Vatrano led the 'A' with 36 goals in 36 games as a rookie.

X-FACTOR Boston's major problem last season was goals against – previously unheard of in Julien's nine-year tenure. A suitable partner to take pressure off Chara is essential, as is a return to form by Rask.

THE BRASS A second straight playoff miss resulted in a shakeup of Julien's staff, as longtime assistants Doug Houda and Doug Jarvis were dismissed. Replacements are Bruce Cassidy, coach at AHL Providence for five seasons, and Jay Pandolfo, who spent two years in player development. Joe Sacco returns for a third year.

JAKUB ZBORIL

FUTURE WATCH

1 JAKUB ZBORIL, D
AGE 19 TEAM Saint John (QMJHL)
Plays with a physical edge and not shy about rushing puck or playing shutdown role.

2 CHARLIE MCAVOY, D
AGE 18 TEAM Boston University (HE)
Offensive blueliner plays a take-charge style and has the smarts to make it work out.

3 JAKOB FORSBACKA-KARLSSON, C
AGE 19 TEAM Boston University (HE)
Does all the little things in game well, but needs to refine his offensive touch.

4 MALCOLM SUBBAN, G
AGE 22 TEAM Providence (AHL)
Bruins signed Khodobin as insurance, but Subban sure to win backup job to Rask.

5 TRENT FREDERIC, C
AGE 18 TEAM U.S. NTDP (USHL)
Pro-built winger bound for Wisconsin. He's strong along the board and has puck skills.

6 ZACH SENYSHYN, RW
AGE 19 TEAM Sault Ste. Marie (OHL)
Speedy winger with scoring smarts still needs to shore up his defensive awareness.

7 BRANDON CARLO, D
AGE 19 TEAM Tri-City (WHL)
Towering shutdown defender had nice showing at WJC. Will be a young AHLer at 19.

8 JAKE DEBRUSK, LW
AGE 19 TEAM Red Deer (WHL)
Goal-scoring prowess dried up in final junior season. Pro debut in AHL will be telling.

9 FRANK VATRANO, LW
AGE 22 TEAM Providence (AHL)
Short, but stocky winger will get a chance to show if AHL scoring binge is for real.
ACQUIRED Free agent, March, 2015 NHL '16-17

10 ALEX KHOKLACHEV, C
AGE 23 TEAM Providence (AHL)
Didn't get top-six forward opportunity so took off to KHL. Could return in a couple of years.

BUFFALO SABRES

BY JOHN VOGL

The Buffalo Sabres have left the basement. Buoyed by the move, they hope they're ready to make a push for the penthouse.

After two seasons in 30th place, Buffalo enjoyed a 27-point improvement last season to vault to 23rd. The team still didn't contend for a playoff spot, but the goal this season is to end a five-year postseason drought.

To that end, the Sabres snagged one of the top free agents in Kyle Okposo, who bought in to the organization's revival for seven years and $42 million. He adds a power forward dimension to a talented group of forwards. The defense still needs work, and the goaltending remains a question mark, but the pieces are in place up front for what has the potential to be a dynamic offense.

OFFENSE Okposo has averaged 0.88 points per game the past three seasons, ranking 17th in the NHL. He joins surprising rookie Sam Reinhart (23 goals) at the top of the right wing depth chart. Centers Ryan O'Reilly and Jack Eichel have proven they can get wingers the puck. O'Reilly played in the All-Star Game during his first season in Buffalo, and Eichel made the all-rookie team with a 24-goal, 56-point season that lived up to the hype. Rasmus Ristolainen, 21, put up 41 points to rank in the top 25 among defensemen. Evander Kane finished with 20 goals, but police investigated him twice for off-ice incidents. He quickly wore out his welcome after getting a fresh start away from the Winnipeg Jets.

DEFENSE Overloaded with right-hand shots, the Sabres swung a deal with Florida to acquire lefty Dmitry Kulikov. He will skate alongside Ristolainen, allowing Buffalo to ease Josh Gorges' workload. Aside from Ristolainen, who has the ability to start a rush, the main job for the Sabres' defenders is to quickly advance the puck to the talented forwards. Rookie Jake McCabe grew into the role and will join Zach Bogosian on the second pairing. Depth could be an issue with no one impressing in the minors. College free agent Casey Nelson showed promise after a late-season signing, but it's not clear if he's ready for a full year in the NHL.

GOALTENDING Robin Lehner gets another chance to prove he's a No. 1. He sustained a severely sprained ankle during the season opener and was out until mid-January, then ended his season early to have surgery. He played only 21 games, but he impressed with a .924 save percentage. Lehner needs to stay healthy because new backup Anders Nilsson (.901 save percentage with Edmonton and St. Louis last year) is a downgrade from Chad Johnson (.920), who carried the load admirably after Lehner went down.

SPECIAL TEAMS Eichel proved to be an immediate weapon in open ice, putting up 21 power play points to trail O'Reilly by just one. Buffalo will need to make better use of Eichel's blistering shot and can use Okposo to open lanes. The penalty killers gave the Sabres their first top-10 finish since 2009-10, which was a big reason their goals against per game dropped more than a half a goal. To keep it up, they will need to replace the contributions of David Legwand, whose veteran savvy allowed him to pace the forwards with an average of 2:25 minutes of shorthanded time.

INTANGIBLES While with the New York Islanders, Okposo saw how a team can grow into a contender after dwelling in the cellar for a long time. He knows it takes confidence, and he wants to help the young Sabres quickly gain it.

ROOKIES Buffalo-born Justin Bailey shone as a first-year pro in the AHL, recording 20 goals and 45 points with the Rochester Americans. Blessed with speed and a 6-foot-3, 210-pound frame, he will make an impact even if he doesn't make the opening-night roster. Hudson Fasching and Evan Rodrigues will be waiting for call-ups.

X-FACTOR The Sabres have a promising offense, and they've improved the defense. It's up to Lehner to be the difference between playoff hopeful and post-season participant. If he looks as good during a whole season as he did during his short stint, the Sabres will play more than 82 games.

THE BRASS As quick with a quip as he is with a trade offer, Murray has become one of the league's must-watch GMs. Charged with rebuilding the Sabres from scratch, he's got them on the cusp of contending for a playoff spot. He won't hesitate to make a deal for any pieces that might be missing.

PREDICTION 4TH in PACIFIC

CALGARY FLAMES

BY RANDY SPORTAK

The predictable step backward for the Calgary Flames in 2015-16 brought about change. Gone is coach Bob Hartley, just one season removed from winning the Jack Adams Award. Gone is every goaltender that had a hand in the league's worst goals-against average. And gone are a few more veterans who played a part in the surprise trip to the second round a couple seasons back.

New bench boss Glen Gulutzan was brought to the Stampede City to guide the rebuild back on track and implement a game plan with more emphasis on possession, while Brian Elliott and Chad Johnson are tagged with providing the goaltending backbone for a club with the talent to make the playoffs. The Flames aren't on the cusp of hoisting the Stanley Cup, but finishing well back of the second-season party again will set off even more changes.

OFFENSE The Flames cracked the top 10 in scoring, with young stars Johnny Gaudreau and Sean Monahan leading the way. Continued growth from Sam Bennett after an 18-goal rookie season could propel the offense to among the league's elite. Throw in the steady production of Mark Giordano, T.J. Brodie and Dougie Hamilton on defense, as well as secondary contributions up front from Mikael Backlund, Michael Frolik and free agent addition Troy Brouwer, and the offense will remain potent. With Brouwer and Alex Chiasson, both 6-foot-3, now in the fold, the Flames will score more gritty goals instead of relying heavily on playmaking off the rush. Whether it's young players pushing their way onto the roster or bounce-back seasons from veterans, secondary scoring is a necessity.

DEFENSE Giordano, Brodie and Hamilton were all top point producers. That's the good news. The bad? Calgary's defensive play was entirely unproductive. As much as the goalies were deservedly panned for the team's dismal goals-against average, the play in front of them was just as abysmal. High-quality scoring chances were surrendered by the boatload, something Gulutzan will address. The Flames will continue to play their up-tempo style but need more players playing two-way games along the lines of what Backlund and Frolik provide. The stars up front especially must improve their defensive play.

GOALTENDING Calgary's season-long fiasco in goal made upgrading between the pipes the top priority. Enter Elliott, who has the opportunity he's wanted for years – a shot to be the clear-cut No. 1. He capped his time in St. Louis by leading the Blues to the Western Conference final before asking to be traded. After looking at other options, the Flames were happy to bring him into the fold. Chad Johnson, coming off a strong season in Buffalo, will back Elliott up.

SPECIAL TEAMS Gaudreau, Monahan, Giordano and Hamilton are the key pieces to a strong first power play unit, and Brouwer provides a crash-the-net element to make it more productive. But depth problems made the second unit a non-factor. This is where 2016 sixth-overall pick Matthew Tkachuk will have a big opportunity if he cracks the lineup, though Bennett and Backlund must kick-start the second crew. The league's worst penalty kill has nowhere to go but up. Better goaltending will help, as will a healthy Lance Bouma.

INTANGIBLES The additions of Elliott and Brouwer don't only address holes in the lineup but also add leadership and playoff experience. The Flames are still a young squad and veterans from winning programs must provide helpful guidance. How the core players respond to the demands of Gulutzan will be intriguing.

ROOKIES With the lack of scoring wingers with size, Tkachuk will get every chance to make the club. A nine-game audition is certainly in the cards. A handful of other forwards, such as Hunter Shinkaruk, Emile Poirier, Mark Jankowski and Daniel Pribyl, will battle for depth positions.

X-FACTOR The Flames made the playoffs two years ago thanks to a huge amount of good luck and middle-of-the-pack goaltending. Whether Elliott can bring to Calgary the form he had in St. Louis will go a long way toward a return, but this team also needs bounce-back years from nearly everyone beyond their stars.

THE BRASS Hartley, the second-longest tenured coach in Flames history, is known for his demanding ways, so it's not a surprise his methods wore thin after four years. Gulutzan is no less demanding, but a different voice and a positive nature is what GM Brad Treliving was looking for in his first hire.

FUTURE WATCH

1 MATTHEW TKACHUK, LW
AGE 18 TEAM London (OHL)
Son of ex-NHL sniper Keith also plays with gusto and has great finishing ability.

2 JON GILLIES, G
AGE 22 TEAM Stockton (AHL)
Corrective hip surgery robbed him of development year. Solid AHL year will fast-track him.

3 RASMUS ANDERSSON, D
AGE 19 TEAM Barrie (OHL)
Thick-bodied, mature defender plays with poise and high IQ. Just needs added foot speed.

4 EMILE POIRIER, RW
AGE 21 TEAM Stockton (AHL)
Stagnated development in AHL has put him on the clock. Time to produce or move on.

5 OLIVER KYLINGTON, D
AGE 19 TEAM Stockton (AHL)
Moves around ice quickly and effortlessly. Defensive awareness needs ramping up.

6 MARK JANKOWSKI, C
AGE 22 TEAM Providence (HE)
Slow, steady apprenticeship needs AHL seasoning. How much of an offensive bent is there?
ACQUIRED 21st overall, 2012 NHL '17-18

7 HUNTER SHINKARUK, LW
AGE 21 TEAM Stockton (AHL)
Small winger has crafty puck skills, but does he have the staying power to play in top six?
ACQUIRED From Van, Feb. 2016 NHL '16-17

8 ANDREW MANGIAPANE, LW
AGE 20 TEAM Barrie (OHL)
Ripped up the OHL for 210 points in two seasons so rookie test in AHL will be telling.

9 TYLER PARSONS, G
AGE 18 TEAM London (OHL)
Acrobatic movements and flexibility in crease remind scouts of Jonathan Quick.
ACQUIRED 54th overall, 2016 NHL '20-21

10 BRANDON HICKEY, D
AGE 20 TEAM Boston University (HE)
Didn't flourish offensively as anticipated as a sophomore, so junior year is pivotal.

CAROLINA HURRICANES

BY LUKE DECOCK

The Carolina Hurricanes never made the playoffs in Eric Staal's seven seasons as captain. Now, as they move into a new era without their longtime franchise cornerstone, they hope to build on the optimism generated in Bill Peters' second year behind the bench and end that drought.

The promising young defense is unchanged, the goalie tandem remains in tact and the team largely sat out of free agency. The Hurricanes will need considerable progression up front from Elias Lindholm and exciting newcomers Teuvo Teravainen and Sebastian Aho. Continuing contributions from Jordan Staal and Jeff Skinner, both of whom rebounded in 2015-16, will help carry the young club.

While uncertainty swirls around the team during owner Peter Karmanos' increasingly prolonged attempt to sell the franchise, renewed on-ice success would give fans reason to get excited again.

OFFENSE Peters' efficient, possession-based system created plenty of scoring chances, but the Hurricanes didn't finish nearly enough of them. The focus of the offense shifts from one Staal to another, with Eric gone and Jordan coming off a solid two-way season. Skinner scored 28 goals and showed growth off the ice, while Lindholm, the fifth-overall pick in 2013, regressed. Aho enters with high expectations, but the acquisition of Teravainen will relieve some of that pressure. Lee Stempniak and Viktor Stalberg arrived via free agency to add depth on the wing, while Justin Faulk is among the best at pounding the puck from the blueline.

DEFENSE Carolina's plan to bring along its young 'D' slowly went out the window when James Wisniewski was lost for the season after only 47 seconds. But it was for the best. Noah Hanifin, Jaccob Slavin and Brett Pesce struggled at times but mostly thrived, and the Canes ended up buying out Wisniewski. Faulk – a veteran at only 24 – is on the fringe of the Norris Trophy conversation. At 19, Hanifin is a future star. Slavin impressed with his skating and first pass, while Ron Hainsey provides veteran stability and Matt Tennyson adds depth through free agency. The only question mark is 2011 first-rounder Ryan Murphy, who's running out of chances to show he's an NHLer.

JEFF SKINNER

GOALTENDING With Eric Staal's departure, Cam Ward is the only player remaining from the 2006 Stanley Cup team, taking a considerable pay cut to stay. It was a position that cried out for change – team save percentage ranked 29th – but the Hurricanes decided Ward at a discount was better than taking their chances with a replacement. Eddie Lack returns after a miserable first season in Carolina.

SPECIAL TEAMS A solid penalty kill, helped by the NHL's second-best faceoff percentage, was a strong point, led by Jordan Staal and Jay McClement up front and Hainsey, Slavin and Faulk on the back end. Stempniak will help as well. Like the rest of the offense, however, the power play struggled. Teravainen and Aho will provide an infusion of skill, but the Hurricanes still need more from Staal, Skinner, Lindholm and Victor Rask with the man advantage. In Faulk and Hanifin, Carolina has two competent triggermen.

INTANGIBLES The leadership void created by Eric Staal's departure needs to be filled. It goes deeper than the top. The Hurricanes have a young team and a vanilla dressing room, and they could still use an infusion of character before training camp. Could Jordan Staal flourish as a leader now that his brother is gone?

ROOKIES Based on his play in Finland and internationally at both the junior and pro levels, Aho should jump immediately onto the top two lines. Haydn Fleury and Trevor Carrick could find their way onto the roster at some point given the openings on defense.

X-FACTOR The Hurricanes head into the season with the same D-corps and goaltending, so the question is whether they can generate enough offense to close the 10-point gap between them and the playoffs – despite having what might end up as the smallest payroll in the NHL.

THE BRASS Since taking over for Jim Rutherford in 2014, GM Ron Francis has taken a patient approach to making the team younger and quicker through the draft. His best move so far was hiring the no-nonsense Peters, who has built a foundation for success. Karmanos has been trying to sell the team for two years, creating an environment of uncertainty.

CHICAGO BLACKHAWKS

BY MATT CARLSON

Capping a sublime season, Patrick Kane skated off with the Hart and Art Ross Trophies, plus the Ted Lindsay Award, while rookie whiz Artemi Panarin broke away with the Calder Trophy. And yet the Chicago Blackhawks failed to capture the trophy that matters most, falling 13 wins short of their fourth Stanley Cup.

The Blackhawks say they're hungrier than ever to reclaim the championship they won in 2010, 2013 and 2015, and they have the moxie and core of high-end players that make them a candidate to do it. And Chicago's skaters have been able to recharge over the summer after a seven-game, first-round playoff exit against St. Louis that followed three straight deep playoff runs.

But will the Blackhawks have the depth? Salary cap restrictions once again forced GM Stan Bowman to shed key players, notably Andrew Shaw and Teuvo Teravainen. He then used a narrow margin to re-acquire defenseman Brian Campbell, who plugs a hole on the blueline. The bigger question is up front, where the Blackhawks struggled to establish a smooth four-line rotation that was a key to their three championships.

OFFENSE Eight forwards have locks on jobs: Kane, Panarin, Jonathan Toews, Artem Anisimov, Marian Hossa, Marcus Kruger, Andrew Desjardins and Richard Panik. Prospects could fill the remaining spots. And the Blackhawks have promising kids, even if Bowman won't rate them or their readiness. But he's quick to mention former NCAA scoring stars Tyler Motte and Nick Schmaltz, who left college early to sign pro contracts. Vinnie Hinostroza, another former collegiate, led AHL Rockford in scoring last season. The mix also includes Brandon Mashinter, Kyle Baun, Mark McNeill, Ryan Hartman and Tanner Kero. They got a taste of the NHL in 2015-16 as the Blackhawks shuffled 26 forwards in and out of the lineup.

DEFENSE Campbell, a member of Chicago's 2010 Cup team, gave the Blackhawks a discount when he signed a one-year, $1.5-million deal. At 37 years old, he led Florida with 22:16 in ice time per game. That means a No. 4 slot behind mega minute munchers Duncan Keith, Brent Seabrook and Niklas Hjalmarsson. Trevor van Riemsdyk made a big jump in his first full NHL season, but he won't be expected to log top-four minutes. Now Bowman expects other defensemen to step up, too. The Hawks signed mobile 26-year-old Michal Kempny and re-signed stay-at-home Michal Rozsival as part of the depth equation. Prospects Ville Pokka and Gustav Forsling will get looks, as well as Viktor Svedberg and Erik Gustafsson, who shuttled in and out the lineup last season.

GOALTENDING Corey Crawford is the undisputed No. 1, and Scott Darling is a reliable backup who has risen to the occasion when needed. A concussion sidelined Crawford for 11 games at the end of a career-high 35-win, seven-shutout season, and that eliminated him from Vezina Trophy consideration.

SPECIAL TEAMS Despite years of elite skill, the Blackhawks' power play didn't sparkle until last season when it clicked to become one of the league's best. Hossa said the difference was spreading out ice time among the top players. As good as the power play was, however, the usually reliable penalty kill sagged significantly, dropping into the bottom third of the league.

INTANGIBLES The Blackhawks have won more games on big stages than any other team in recent years, and they will return energized after a long summer. But with its depth in doubt and being in the NHL's toughest division, Chicago isn't even guaranteed to make the playoffs, much less return to the final.

ROOKIES There should be plenty. Because he's older and KHL-tested, expect Kempny to have the best shot at making an immediate impact.

X-FACTOR Kane is 27 and projects he will improve. Panarin said the same of himself when he accepted the Calder. Expect quiet progress from the 28-year-old Toews. Keith is 33 but shows no signs of slowing down, though eyes will be on Seabrook, 31, and Hossa, 37, for signs of mileage.

THE BRASS The salary cap has hamstrung the Blackhawks like no other team for successful player development. Bowman keeps juggling the best he can. Quenneville arrived in Chicago in October 2008, but there's no indication the second-winningest coach in NHL history isn't connecting with his players.

NICK SCHMALTZ

FUTURE WATCH

1 NICK SCHMALTZ, C
AGE 20 TEAM North Dakota (NCHC)
Break-out year in NCAA led to pro acceleration. A good camp and he'll win an NHL job.

2 RYAN HARTMAN, RW
AGE 22 TEAM Rockford (AHL)
The short, but always-involved winger can also provide a bit of offense from the third line.

3 ALEX DEBRINCAT, RW
AGE 18 TEAM Erie (OHL)
Very small, but slippery on puck. Exceptionally talented, creative and productive.

4 CHAD KRYS, D
AGE 18 TEAM U.S. NTDP (USHL)
Offensive calling card will shine at Boston University. Two-way game a work in progress.
ACQUIRED 45th overall, 2016 NHL '20-21

5 VINCE HINOSTROZA, C
AGE 22 TEAM Rockford (AHL)
Notre Dame product led Rockford in scoring and had dry seven-game NHL trial.

6 VILLE POKKA, D
AGE 22 TEAM Rockford (AHL)
Nice development for robust, two-way defender. Only skating is holding him back.
ACQUIRED From NYI, Oct., 2014 NHL '16-17

7 MARK MCNEILL, RW
AGE 23 TEAM Rockford (AHL)
Wait has been interminable for 2011 first-rounder. Cheap salary will open door for him.

8 GRAHAM KNOTT, LW
AGE 19 TEAM Niagara (OHL)
Goal total sliced in half not a good sign. Budding power forward bulking up.

9 GUSTAV FORSLING, D
AGE 20 TEAM Linkoping (Swe.)
Additional ice time in top Swedish league for small defender led to big bump in points.
ACQUIRED From Van, Jan., 2015 NHL '18-19

10 TYLER MOTTE, C
AGE 21 TEAM Michigan (Big Ten)
Breakout junior year in NCAA led to pro contract. Small, but has nifty hands.

COLORADO AVALANCHE

BY MIKE CHAMBERS

Since their 112-point season in 2013-14, the Colorado Avalanche have continually regressed, slipping steadily to 39 wins and 82 points in 2015-16. And absent major upgrades, the Avalanche might be stuck in the same rut – or worse – heading into Year 4 of the coinciding tenures of coach Patrick Roy and GM Joe Sakic.

On top of persistent puck possession woes, a 17-20-4 home record and a penchant to lose games in the third period were the club's downfall. Despite adding rentals Shawn Matthias and Mikkel Boedker at the trade deadline, the Colorado ultimately folded, dropping its final six games and eight of its last 10. Blue-chip youngsters Mikko Rantanen and Calvin Pickard are set to play exclusively in Colorado, but the franchise will look to the same core to turn things around.

OFFENSE Matt Duchene reached 30 goals for the first time, but his assists were down. And like his teammates, expectations weren't met. The Avalanche have electric talent, but puck possession and offensive zone time have been poor. Duchene, Nathan MacKinnon, Gabriel Landeskog and others need to channel their 2013-14 play when everything seemed to click. The club will need another solid season from Carl Soderberg, who amassed a career-high 51 points in his first season with Colorado, and another 20-goal campaign from Jarome Iginla, 39. Rantanen, who tore up the AHL as a first-year pro in North America, will likely play with Duchene or MacKinnon. Free agent signee Joe Colborne further supplements the forward talent. From the back end, double-digit goal output is again expected from Erik Johnson and Tyson Barrie.

DEFENSE The top three rearguards remain the same in Johnson, Barrie and Francois Beauchemin. Sakic signed Patrick Wiercioch and Fedor Tyutin to modest one-year deals and is allowing 2013 draftees Nikita Zadorov and Chris Bigras to develop on the fly. Eric Gelinas, acquired from the Devils late last season, is also in the picture, and Sakic hasn't given up on 2011 first-rounder Duncan Siemens, who has played just one career NHL game so far. Overall team defense has become an issue, with the goals-against average dropping two straight years to nearly what it was when Sakic and Roy took over (3.13).

GOALTENDING Semyon Varlamov is the No. 1, but his 2.81 goals-against average and .914 save percentage was third-best on the team behind Pickard (2.56, .922) and Reto Berra (2.41, .922). Berra was moved to the Panthers, leaving Pickard, who signed his first one-way NHL contract, as the backup. Varlamov was great at times but hasn't played consistently well since 2013-14 when he won a franchise-record 41 games. Pickard will push him.

SPECIAL TEAMS Colorado was underwhelming on both sides of special teams. Iginla scored 13 of his 22 goals on the power play – proving his age isn't an issue when winding up from the left side – but Duchene and MacKinnon only combined for 15, and Landeskog had a disappointing four. The penalty kill went from being one of the league's best in 2014-15 to one of the worst. Assistant coaches Tim Army (power play) and Dave Farrish (penalty kill) are expected to return.

INTANGIBLES Toughness isn't a core concern but Cody McLeod is a 32-year-old fourth-liner and Iginla might play his final season in the bottom six. Much falls on the shoulders of captain Landeskog, who will likely be the only Avs player with a letter on his chest playing more than 16 minutes per game and throwing his body around.

ROOKIES Rantanen, the 10th pick in 2015, led AHL San Antonio with 24 goals and 60 points. He was pointless in nine games with the Avalanche but primarily played a secondary role. He is expected to shine in the top six. Forwards J.T. Compher, 21, and A.J. Greer, 19, will likely begin in the AHL.

X-FACTOR The big question for the third consecutive season is whether the blueline is good enough to curb the trend of poor possession. Addressing that problem with 21-year-olds Zadorov and Bigras is a risk.

THE BRASS Roy's three Avalanche teams have been poor in possession and shot differential, and coaching has come into question. But a change is unlikely unless ownership steps in. Roy also holds the title of vice-president of hockey operations and is the No. 2 day-to-day executive behind Sakic. If struggles continue and the club falls short of the playoffs for the eighth time in 11 years, Roy might have to resign for a coaching change to take place.

FUTURE WATCH

1 MIKKO RANTANEN, RW
AGE 19 TEAM San Antonio (AHL)
Smooth-skating playmaker. Will put up points with his ability to see plays develop.

2 TYSON JOST, C
AGE 18 TEAM Penticton (BCHL)
An exceptionally strong skater who plays at a high pace. An adept offensive weapon.

3 CALVIN PICKARD, G
AGE 24 TEAM San Antonio (AHL)
Ultra-competitive, technically sound stopper who has been rock solid in limited NHL duty.

4 CHRIS BIGRAS, D
AGE 21 TEAM San Antonio (AHL)
Dependable blueliner who plays a simple, yet effective game. Extremely intelligent.

5 CAM MORRISON, LW
AGE 18 TEAM Youngstown (USHL)
Wins battles along the boards and in the corners with his size. Pucks seem to find him.

6 ANDREI MIRONOV, D
AGE 22 TEAM Moscow (KHL)
A big, punishing defensive rearguard with plenty of big-game experience.

7 J.T. COMPHER, RW
AGE 21 TEAM Michigan (Big Ten)
Competitive energy player with good speed. Can provide offense in a bottom-six role.
ACQUIRED From Buf, June, 2015 NHL '17-18

8 JEAN-CHRISTOPHE BEAUDIN, C
AGE 19 TEAM Rouyn-Noranda (QMJHL)
Skilled speedster who greatly improved his offensive numbers in second junior season.

9 NICOLAS MELOCHE, D
AGE 19 TEAM Gatineau (QMJHL)
A big, physical defenseman not afraid to mix it up while contributing offensively.

10 ROCCO GRIMALDI, C
AGE 23 TEAM Portland (AHL)
Offensively gifted player with good shooting, passing and skating skills. Lacks size.

COLUMBUS BLUE JACKETS

PREDICTION

STANLEY CUP ODDS /// 45-1 BY AARON PORTZLINE

Through all of their debacles and embarrassments, all of the botched draft picks, failed free agent signings and horrible turns of luck, the Columbus Blue Jackets have never had a more disappointing season than 2015-16. Picked by most to the make the playoffs and by many to challenge in the Metropolitan Division, Columbus set a modern NHL record with an 0-8-0 start, fired a coach, traded a No. 1 center and finished 27th in the league. So what's changed since then? Not much.

The Blue Jackets parted ways with two longtime veterans, buying out Fedor Tyutin and Jared Boll. They expect three, maybe four rookies to make the team. But management didn't backhoe or dynamite the roster, perhaps because the brass couldn't unload underperforming players with huge contracts, some with no-move clauses. Thus, 2016-17 will be about redemption, not rebirth.

OFFENSE Brandon Saad (31 goals), Boone Jenner (30) and Cam Atkinson (27) all set career highs last season, so the Blue Jackets aren't a lost cause up front. Still, there are huge question marks, especially since No. 1 center Ryan Johansen was traded to Nashville in January. Without Johansen, captain Nick Foligno's production plummeted, from 31 goals and 73 points in 2014-15, to 12 and 37 last season. To fill Johansen's void, Jenner will likely move from left wing to center, joining Brandon Dubinsky and Alexander Wennberg down the middle. To help the forwards, the Blue Jackets need much more from their back end. Only New Jersey had fewer goals from its defense than Columbus.

DEFENSE The news wasn't much better going the other way, as only Calgary allowed more goals than Columbus did, and things only improved slightly after Seth Jones was acquired mid-season. Unless Zach Werenski bombs at training camp, he's a lock to make the roster after a brilliant run at season's end in the AHL. Once he gets his legs under him, the 2015 No. 8 overall pick will be a big boost. Werenski, 19, would give the Blue Jackets three blue-chippers – Ryan Murray, 23, and Jones, 22, are the others – on a D-corps that has always been short on speed and skill. Nobody knows how long it will take for those three to realize their potential, but the Blue Jackets believe it will be worth the wait.

GOALTENDING Much dust has gathered on Sergei Bobrovsky's Vezina Trophy since 2012-13. Bobrovsky was abysmal during the 0-8-0 start, admitting he'd lost his confidence. The rest of the season was sidetracked by three more groin injuries – his fifth in three seasons – and long stretches out of the lineup. So much more is expected from the NHL's second-highest-paid goaltender, and he'll get a push from youngsters Joonas Korpisalo and Anton Forsberg.

SPECIAL TEAMS With so little punch from the back end, the Blue Jackets' power play took a nosedive, going from fifth to 21st. Don't be surprised if Wennberg sees time on the point, as the options are slim until the young blueliners are ready. With two-way forwards like Dubinsky, Jenner and Foligno, Columbus should be strong on the penalty kill but must cut down on penalties. They were shorthanded 279 times last season, fifth most in the league. The Blue Jackets hired assistant Brad Shaw, who had a strong decade of coaching the penalty kill in St. Louis.

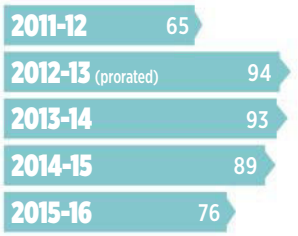
Regular Season Points



INTANGIBLES Foligno's first crack at being captain was a bigger challenge than anybody imagined, and coach John Tortorella didn't mince words in questioning this club's leadership. It continued in the off-season, when Tortorella said he thought too many veterans were too comfortable in Columbus. A decent start to the season, for once, will lift the mood, but it's not hard to see this getting worse before it gets better.

ROOKIES Columbus' AHL affiliate in Lake Erie won the Calder Cup with ease – the Monsters swept the final two rounds – and a few players are sure to graduate. Along with Werenski, forwards Josh Anderson, Oliver Bjorkstrand and maybe Sonny Milano will press for time in training camp. Management wants veteran players looking over their shoulders.

X-FACTOR The Blue Jackets' cumulative record in the first 20 games over the past five seasons: 30-60-10. In the final 20 games over those five seasons: 61-35-4. Ruining seasons and then spoiling draft picks isn't a formula for success.

THE BRASS Patience is waning with the Blue Jackets front office, but Tortorella has a chance to be a cult hero in Central Ohio if he can turn this wayward ship around. Columbus is a college town at heart, and college towns worship winning coaches and big personalities.

SCOUTING REPORT
He was the big surprise of the first round, but Dubois has a ton of talent. The two-way threat switched from wing to center during the year and actually got better. Racks up points and plays with a nasty edge.

DALLAS STARS

BY MIKE HEIKA

The Dallas Stars' climb back to relevancy happened almost overnight. Now, the timing is right for them to go all-in on the franchise's second Stanley Cup.

While the union of coach Lindy Ruff and GM Jim Nill has produced the most explosive offensive team in the NHL, there still are issues on defense and in goal that must be ironed out. Nill might have accomplished the necessary task of overhauling the blueline, adding the stable Dan Hamhuis to the mix and developing a crop of youngsters, but the new concern is if the D-corps is too inexperienced.

The Stars showed they're a powerhouse to be reckoned with during the regular season. The question is whether they take the next step and become a playoff force.

OFFENSE Dallas led the league in scoring by 17 goals thanks to top-level talent and depth. Jamie Benn ranks second in NHL scoring over the past three seasons with 255 points and Tyler Seguin is fourth with 234. They are currently the best 1-2 punch in hockey. But the Stars also have Jason Spezza (33 goals), Patrick Sharp (20), Cody

GRAIG ABEL/NHLI VIA GETTY IMAGES

Eakin (16), Mattias Janmark (15), Antoine Roussel (13) and Ales Hemsky (13). Yes, Spezza and Sharp are early-thirtysomethings due for declines, but both are ideally slotted in secondary scoring roles, insulated by the explosive Benn-Seguin tandem, so they should maintain their pace. What's more, Dallas is bringing in players off a Texas Stars team that led the AHL in scoring. Curtis McKenzie is a depth forward in the NHL, but he had 55 points in the AHL last season. Brett Ritchie had 28 points in 35 AHL games.

DEFENSE Gone are Alex Goligoski, Jason Demers and Kris Russell. In are Dan Hamhuis, Esa Lindell and Stephen Johns. The new trio is much bigger and also leans more to the defensive side of the ice, but they can move the puck efficiently, too. The problem is that there is a 37-point drop-off between John Klingberg and the next highest scoring Stars defenseman, so continued production from Klingberg is crucial. The 23-year-old had 58 points, ranking fifth among all NHL blueliners.

JAMIE BENN

GOALTENDING Nill took a huge risk in earmarking $10.4 million for two 32-year-old goalies, but he thought the window to win was now, and he was rewarded with 25 wins apiece from Kari Lehtonen and Antti Niemi. But he's now stuck with two mediocre goaltenders who combined for the 19th-best goals-against average and tied for the 23rd-best save percentage. Expect Nill to pursue an upgrade between the pipes through trade.

SPECIAL TEAMS The Stars' speed and attacking style creates power play opportunities, and their skill helps cash in, so they have the potential to be the best in the league. Dallas saw its man-advantage opportunities drop from second to ninth yet saw power play goals rise from fourth to second. If they can draw more penalties, the Stars should be able to lead the league in extra-man tallies by a significant margin. Dallas' penalty kill cracked the top 10 for the first time since 2007-08 when it was second-best in the league.

INTANGIBLES The goaltending question is a significant one. The Stars could be attempting to prop up their two veteran goalies while trying to work a trade for either. If the situation doesn't resolve with improvement, however, either from the current tandem or an outside upgrade, a championship isn't realistic.

ROOKIES All eyes will be on Johns and Lindell. Johns was excellent in his call-up and adds a physical edge to a team that needs it badly. Lindell has just four NHL games under his belt, but he will play for Finland in the World Cup. He helped the Finns win world junior gold in 2014 and capture World Championship silver in 2016. He may have the ability to play with Klingberg after a 42-point season with Texas.

X-FACTOR Radek Faksa was one of the club's top playoff performers and seems to have locked down the third-line center position. That forces Ruff to find a new slot for Eakin. One possibility is moving Eakin up to the top line with Benn and Seguin.

THE BRASS The trio of Nill, Ruff and owner Tom Gaglardi has quickly advanced the franchise. Now, it has to push the right buttons to finish the job. There are plenty of good prospects to be moved for upgrades, but a trade like the Russell deal shows it's not easy to find the proper pieces to push a team over the top.

FUTURE WATCH

1 JULIUS HONKA, D
AGE 20 TEAM Texas (AHL)
Fast and agile, he brings a ton of offense from the back end. Plays bigger than he is.

2 DENIS GURIANOV, RW
AGE 19 TEAM Lada Togliatti (KHL)
His production wasn't great last year, but he's a well-rounded player with tons of potential.

3 RILEY TUFTE, LW
AGE 18 TEAM Blaine (USHS)
Mr. Hockey Award winner is a good skater with good hands. Bound for Minnesota-Duluth.

4 JASON DICKINSON, C
AGE 21 TEAM Texas (AHL)
Skilled two-way forward who can play center or wing. Reliable defensively and puts up points.

5 BRETT RITCHIE, RW
AGE 23 TEAM Texas (AHL)
A power forward with a good offensive game. Needs to find another level when recalled.

6 RADEK FAKSA, C
AGE 22 TEAM Texas (AHL)
Proved he can score in the AHL, it just hasn't translated to the NHL. Plays with an edge.

7 ESA LINDELL, D
AGE 22 TEAM Texas (AHL)
Likes to join the rush and makes good reads offensively. Must be more consistent defensively.

8 DEVIN SHORE, C
AGE 22 TEAM Texas (AHL)
A smart, creative playmaking center who can quarterback a power play.

9 ROOPE HINTZ, LW
AGE 19 TEAM HIFK (Fin.)
High hockey IQ for a player his age. An offensive catalyst who plays with high energy.

10 NIKLAS HANSSON, D
AGE 21 TEAM HV71 (Swe.)
Lethal on the power play. His skating needs to develop before he makes the jump to the NHL.

SCOUTING REPORT
One of the most intriguing raw prospects out of Minnesota high school in a long time, Tufte dominated locally but had more trouble in two USHL stints. He's a Minnesota-Duluth commit with size and speed.

DETROIT RED WINGS

STANLEY CUP ODDS /// 32-1 BY BOB DUFF

After barely scraping into the playoffs and then exiting in the first round for the third successive season, the Detroit Red Wings promised change, then went for more of the same.

Adding Frans Nielsen to fill the void left by Pavel Datsyuk's departure to Russia made sense, but turning to a declining Thomas Vanek to boost their flagging attack did not. The Red Wings wear the look of a team caught between. Their veteran core players are moving beyond their prime and can no longer carry the load. Meanwhile, Detroit's next wave of talented youngsters isn't yet ready for prime time. Seeking to rebuild on the run but with a suspect defense and a lack of goal scoring, this could be the season the Wings' run of 25 consecutive playoff appearances comes to an end.

OFFENSE Everywhere you look, Detroit's numbers are trending downward. The Wings dropped from 235 goals in 2014-15 to 209, an average of just more than 2.5 per game. Individually, south was also the direction most of the team's top scorers headed. Gustav Nyquist plummeted from 27 to 17 goals, Tomas Tatar sagged from 29 to 21 and Justin Abdelkader dropped from 23 to 19. Henrik Zetterberg (17 to 13), Darren Helm (15 to 13) and Luke Glendening (12 to eight) were others who lit fewer red lights. If not for the team-leading 23 goals potted by teenaged rookie Dylan Larkin, the Wings would have been in real trouble, because two players the team was counting on becoming offensive contributors, Tomas Jurco and Teemu Pulkkinen, didn't deliver. Jurco scored four times in 44 games and Pulkkinen, the AHL goal-scoring leader in 2014-15, netted six in 36 games.

DEFENSE Alexey Marchenko is both part of the problem and the solution. Signed to a new two-year deal, Marchenko established himself as a steady defender during his first full season. With Kyle Quincey jettisoned, expect Marchenko to get top-four minutes. The trouble is that all of Detroit's budding 'D' prospects, as well as the team's veteran defenders, are built in the same manner. The team is loaded with second- and third-pair talents, with no top-pair types on the horizon. Niklas Kronwall underwent knee surgery last season with the hope renewed health will boost his declining game. Danny DeKeyser is solid and Brendan Smith shows flashes of excellence, but no Detroit defender is as confounding as Jonathan Ericsson, who is big but doesn't play big at all.

GOALTENDING It was Petr Mrazek's crease to lose in 2015-16, and he nearly lost it. A late-season slump left him stapled to the bench while former No. 1 Jimmy Howard, who endured a slump of his own earlier in the season, carried the workload. Regardless, Mrazek, 27-16-6 with a solid 2.33 goals-against average and .921 save percentage, is Detroit's goalie of the future. The Wings tried desperately to move Howard's hefty contract in the off-season but could find no takers.

SPECIAL TEAMS Detroit suffered a severe power outage on the man advantage, dropping from 69 goals to 50 and finishing middle of the pack. Gustav Nyquist saw his team-leading 14 power play goals in 2014-15 fall to seven. Mike Green was the right-handed point shot that was supposed to bolster the power play, and he did contribute five goals and 20 points to the cause. The Wings hope that the addition of the offensively gifted Vanek provides another boost. The penalty kill was equally middling and scored a league-low two shorthanded goals. Nielsen, third in shorthanded shots on goal, will be an upgrade there.

INTANGIBLES As their core ages, the Wings require their youth to take a collective step forward and move into leadership roles both on the ice and in the dressing room. So far, that hasn't happened.

ROOKIES Is it finally Anthony Mantha's time to arrive? Detroit's top pick in 2013 scored a pair of power play goals during a 10-game late-season call-up but struggled defensively.

X-FACTOR Tatar and Nyquist must return to form as the emerging stars they appeared to be in 2014-15. And with Datsyuk's offense gone, a stall in Larkin's development would be catastrophic for Detroit's playoff hopes.

THE BRASS After his first year in charge, coach Jeff Blashill revamped his staff. Doug Houda will handle the defense and penalty kill, John Torchetti takes over the forwards and power play and Jeff Salajko is the new goalie coach. GM Ken Holland again displayed his loyalty to veterans, re-signing Helm and Drew Miller then inexplicably adding free agent Steve Ott, creating a glut of bottom-six forwards and a logjam that figures to make it difficult for any youngsters to break into the lineup.

SCOUTING REPORT
One of the most notable surprises of the first round, Cholowski has tremendous raw tools as a mobile defenseman, he just needs to put it all together. He'll do that as a freshman at St. Cloud State this season.

EDMONTON OILERS

BY DEREK VAN DIEST

The Edmonton Oilers are a decade removed from playoff hockey, but there's reason for optimism. They have a generational talent in Connor McDavid, are moving into a new downtown arena and signed one of the most coveted free agents in Milan Lucic.

Since replacing Craig MacTavish in April 2015, GM Peter Chiarelli has kept busy overhauling a team stuck in a perpetual rebuild. He made his boldest move shortly after the 2016 draft, trading Taylor Hall to the New Jersey Devils in exchange for Adam Larsson, who fills the Oilers' desperate need for a talented right-shot blueliner. Hall led the team in scoring with 26 goals and 65 points last season and had been the club's de facto leader since being drafted first overall in 2010. His unpopular departure was softened by the signing of Lucic to a seven-year, $42-million contract and the fourth-overall selection of Jesse Puljujarvi, who's NHL-ready.

OFFENSE Despite losing Hall, the Oilers still have plenty of firepower up front with McDavid, Lucic, Jordan Eberle, Ryan Nugent-Hopkins, Leon Draisaitl, Puljujarvi, Benoit Pouliot and Nail Yakupov. On the back end, the options are limited with Andrej Sekera and Oscar Klefbom capable of generating offense. Sekera led Oilers defensemen in scoring last season with six goals and 30 points in 81 games. Klefbom had four goals and 12 points in 30 games, missing the majority of the season with a staph infection in his foot. The addition of Larsson, who had three goals and 18 points with New Jersey, won't do much for the club's blueline scoring issues. Unless Chiarelli acquires an offensive defenseman, the disproportionate majority of Edmonton's goals will come from the forwards.

DEFENSE The Oilers filled a need with the acquisition of Larsson but still have questions on defense. Larsson is a talented shutdown defender, and a healthy Klefbom will upgrade the group. Expectations will be higher for Brandon Davidson, who surprised with a breakout season, and the promising Darnell Nurse will be a year more experienced. Sekera, who is in the second of a six-year deal, provides veteran leadership for them all. Overall, the D-corps won't provide much offense, but keeping pucks out of the net is the main priority.

JORDAN EBERLE

GOALTENDING Cam Talbot enters his second season as Edmonton's starter. After a rocky beginning in his first season in a No. 1 role, Talbot settled in and gave the team quality goaltending. Jonas Gustavsson, signed to a one-year contract, will be his backup. His signing allows Edmonton's top goaltending prospect, Laurent Brossoit, to spend another year developing.

SPECIAL TEAMS The Oilers had a middling power play, but it has the talent to be among the league's best. The missing piece is a skilled defenseman to quarterback the attack. Sekera had assumed that role, but he lacks a threatening shot from the point. The addition of Larsson will help the penalty kill, which featured a carousel of forwards, including McDavid, who proved an effective option. Sekera, Klefbom and Nurse will get the bulk of the work on the back end when down a man or two.

INTANGIBLES Chiarelli has transformed the Oilers into a bigger, grittier group. Lucic joins big men Zack Kassian and Patrick Maroon, who, along with Nurse and Puljujarvi, provide bulk for Edmonton in a heavy Pacific Division. The added size will help the Oilers add a cycle element to their attack, more in line with Chiarelli's vision.

ROOKIES Puljujarvi fell into the Oilers' lap when the Columbus Blue Jackets passed on him at the draft. He'll be well insulated – a luxury not afforded to Eberle, Nugent-Hopkins and Yakupov when they broke in – so he should have an immediate impact.

X-FACTOR There will be high expectations for Lucic, particularly because he replaces Hall, whose trade was an unpopular move in Edmonton. If Lucic disappoints, he could become the target of a disgruntled fan base that has not seen a playoff game in 10 years. The same could be said of Larsson, having been the return for Hall.

THE BRASS It's been more than a decade since Edmonton went to Game 7 of the 2006 Cup final, but the organization has stability behind the bench and in the front office, even though there's still a lot of work to be done on the ice. Todd McLellan enters his second season as coach, and he'll have a transformed team to work with after Chiarelli spent his first year cleaning up the mess made by his predecessors.

PREDICTION
2ND in ATLANTIC

BY GEORGE RICHARDS

The Florida Panthers had their most successful season with 47 wins and 103 points as they surprised to win the Atlantic Division. But just days after losing to the New York Islanders in the first round, word came that things were changing in South Florida. GM Dale Tallon, who built the team, was moved to a new position as president of hockey operations. Associate GM Tom Rowe took Tallon's old role.

The Panthers signed the ageless Jaromir Jagr to a one-year deal after the 44-year-old led the team in scoring with 66 points. Budding superstar Aaron Ekblad was signed to an eight-year contract, the longest the team has ever handed out. Vincent Trocheck, Reilly Smith and Derek MacKenzie were extended, while Keith Yandle, Jason Demers and James Reimer were added. The Panthers have made it clear making the playoffs isn't enough. Expectations are now lofty.

OFFENSE The top line of Jagr, Aleksander Barkov and Jonathan Huberdeau was one of the league's best, but the trio didn't carry the load alone. The second unit of Vincent Trocheck, Jussi Jokinen and Reilly Smith was potent, with Nick Bjugstad sliding up when Trocheck got hurt. Bjugstad is expected to anchor the third line with Derek MacKenzie running the fourth. With Yandle in the mix, the Panthers will also see improved productivity from their blueline.

DEFENSE Longtime Panthers Brian Campbell, Dmitry Kulikov and Erik Gudbranson, as well as captain Willie Mitchell, will not return. Once it became clear Campbell wouldn't re-sign, Florida got aggressive and traded for Yandle's rights then signed him to a seven-year deal. Kulikov was shipped to Buffalo for Mark Pysyk, and Demers was signed to conclude the renovations. Ekblad enters his third season and is under contract for the next nine seasons. Twenty-two-year-old Michael Matheson was superb for Canada at the World Championship, and the 2012 first-rounder could break through. Alex Petrovic, Steven Kampfer and Jakob Kindl add experience, with Boston College's Ian McCoshen expected to challenge for a spot.

GOALTENDING Roberto Luongo, 37, enters his third full season in his second stint with the Panthers, and his past two seasons were terrific. Luongo fought through minor injuries late last year and needed hip surgery in the summer. Reimer signed a five-year deal to give Luongo support, and Reto Berra was acquired for depth.

SPECIAL TEAMS Neither did Florida any favors, finishing in the bottom third in the league in both categories. New assistant coach Dave Barr comes over from the Buffalo Sabres to help jump-start the power play. Having Yandle will help him overhaul it, while Pysyk is expected to help on the second unit. If the Panthers hope to improve their anemic penalty kill, which was easily exploited in their opening-round loss to the Islanders, they'll need to do so from within.

INTANGIBLES Florida lost some toughness when it traded Gudbranson to Vancouver for Jared McCann. And there will be a lot of different faces in the dressing room and behind the bench as coach Gerard Gallant added assistants Barr and Scott Allen. The Panthers are spending money and have seemingly changed the losing culture that permeated the franchise for years.

ROOKIES McCoshen, who just completed three years at Boston College, may start in AHL Springfield but could be on the roster sooner than later. Lawson Crouse is expected to earn a spot, with Kyle Rau (Bjugstad's former college roommate) battling for a position as well. Matheson should capitalize on the momentum of his stellar performance with Canada.

X-FACTOR Florida believes last season's success was no fluke and is ready to prove it to a win-or-be-ignored market. The Panthers revamped their front office and roster, and they redesigned their logo and uniforms this summer. The organization feels completely reworked since Vinnie Viola and Doug Cifu bought the struggling franchise in 2013.

THE BRASS Entering their fourth season, Florida's ownership expects a Cup contender. Tallon moved into his new role with Rowe promoted to GM after starting last season as Florida's AHL coach. The Panthers also reworked their scouting department and promoted Steve Werier and Eric Joyce (Florida's AHL GM) to assist Rowe. Nagging rumors of relocation are gone after ownership struck a big financial deal with Broward County last fall.

LOS ANGELES KINGS

BY DOUG WARD

Two years ago, the Los Angeles Kings stood on the precipice of a dynasty, but they enter 2016-17 nearing the edge of a cliff. After claiming two Stanley Cups in three seasons, the Kings have won one playoff game over the past two years, and this season will go a long way toward telling us if they stand on solid ground or if their castle is now made of sand.

Los Angeles returns a decorated nucleus with Selke and Lady Byng winner Anze Kopitar, Norris Trophy winner Drew Doughty and Vezina finalist Jonathan Quick, along with Marian Gaborik and Jeff Carter. But if the Kings are to keep up in a league that places a premium on speed, players like Carter and swift youngsters Tyler Toffoli and Tanner Pearson must help the team transition from the big, powerful group that won those two Cups to one with more pace.

A fading Dustin Brown remains under contract through 2021-22, and Mike Richards' cap hit is on the books through 2031-32, creating a cap headache for GM-president Dean Lombardi, who was unable to retain Milan Lucic. How he navigates the cap crisis will go a long way toward dictating whether L.A. remains an elite franchise.

JONATHAN KOZUB/NHLI VIA GETTY IMAGES

OFFENSE Under Darryl Sutter, puck possession continues to be the team's hallmark as the Kings again led the NHL in Corsi For. Still, they finished with a middling offense. Toffoli's 31 markers topped the team, while Kopitar led in points with 74. Carter (24 goals, 62 points) remains an offensive force, while free agent addition Teddy Purcell can't be expected to adequately replace the 20 goals and 55 points Lucic took with him to Edmonton. They need Gaborik, who had 12 goals and 22 points in 54 games, to remain healthy.

DEFENSE Defense was a strength for the Kings, who haven't been out of the top 10 in goals against since 2008-09. Doughty anchors the D-corps, but a lack of depth is a concern. The return of Alec Martinez from a groin injury that kept him out of the playoffs will help. Along with the tandem of Doughty and Jake Muzzin, Martinez gives the Kings a solid top three. Tom Gilbert and Zach Trotman were added as free agents to address depth. After a shoulder injury limited him to three games last season, Matt Greene will be back.

DREW DOUGHTY

GOALTENDING With Quick between the pipes, goaltending remains elite. But he turns 31 in January, and if he is unable to remain a workhorse, losing Martin Jones in the 2015 Lucic trade will look even worse. Former King Jeff Zatkoff was signed as a backup.

SPECIAL TEAMS Doughty is key to L.A.'s special teams. The Kings had one of the league's better power plays, and it remains a threat with a quarterback like Doughty. Yet despite Doughty being formidable on the other side of the man advantage as well, the Kings were only average on the penalty kill, leaving room for improvement. It really cost them in their playoff loss to San Jose, particularly in Game 4 when the Sharks won 3-2 on the strength of three power play goals.

INTANGIBLES With Brown stripped of the 'C' in favor of Kopitar, the Kings have shaken things up internally, akin to what the San Jose Sharks did when they gave Joe Thornton's captaincy to Joe Pavelski. If the Kings take their cues from the conscientious Slovenian, work ethic and consistency will never be a problem.

ROOKIES Kevin Gravel is expected to take Luke Schenn's place on the blueline and Nic Dowd will get a look at center. Twenty-year-old winger Adrian Kempe has the talent to force his way onto the club. If Derek Forbort, picked 15th overall in 2010, doesn't break through on the back end, it could be the end of the line for him in L.A.

X-FACTOR Los Angeles has 17 players whose names are on the Stanley Cup, but winning two titles in the past five years has taken a toll, and the Kings' biggest question mark might be whether they remain thirsty enough. Sutter was the perfect coach to jump-start the underachieving Kings back in 2011-12. His challenge now will be to keep them from growing complacent.

THE BRASS Lombardi pushed his chips to the middle of the table in each of the past two unsuccessful seasons. He forfeited a first-round pick to acquire rental Andrej Sekera in February 2015 then paid a step price for one-season rental Lucic last summer. Whether Lombardi has enough markers left to overcome his go-for-broke tactics will help determine whether his term in Los Angeles will be remembered not only for his help in building Cup contenders but also for his inability to maintain them.

SCOUTING REPORT
Coming off an injury-shortened 2014-15, Clague struggled early on, but there's no denying his skills. Skating and hockey sense are his calling cards and if he can get stronger, he'll be an effective pro.

PREDICTION

MINNESOTA WILD

BY MICHAEL RUSSO

After what GM Chuck Fletcher called "a very disappointing season," the Minnesota Wild's big off-season acquisition was behind the bench. Fletcher, who had hired first-year coaches for his first two coaching hires, landed Bruce Boudreau, who led Anaheim and Washington to eight division titles and is the fastest coach in NHL history to reach 400 wins. Boudreau must guide a team known for mid-season swoons. Last year, it followed its best first half in history with losses in 13 of 14 games, which cost Mike Yeo his job.

After attempting reclamation projects in Dany Heatley and Thomas Vanek, the Wild hope they acquired a bargain in Eric Staal (three years, $10.5 million), who at 31 is coming off his worst offensive season since he was a rookie. Fletcher re-acquired Chris Stewart to add bulk and scoring potential but will rely on the young core – Mikael Granlund, Charlie Coyle, Nino Niederreiter and Jason Zucker – and needs Zach Parise's wonky back to be 100 percent.

OFFENSE Boudreau said it's up to him to put Staal in a position to succeed, so he could start between Parise and Coyle, the latter of whom scored a career-high 21 goals. Parise missed the playoffs with a herniated disc, and the Wild need him to return to his 30-goal form. Interim coach John Torchetti may have stumbled on gold when he moved Mikael Granlund from center to left wing next to Mikko Koivu. Granlund was a constant threat and is expected to start there. The Niederreiter-Erik Haula-Jason Pominville line was Minnesota's most effective in the second half. The club needs a resurgence from 33-year-old Pominville, who scored 30 goals two years ago but had 18 and 11 the past two.

DEFENSE The Wild feel the strength of their team is the blueline, and Fletcher was happy not to sacrifice any of his young 'D' in an attempt to acquire a center this summer. The Wild were uncharacteristically inconsistent last season under Yeo, but with Hall of Famer Scott Stevens in as an assistant, Minnesota is looking to return to its stingy ways and be more physical. Stevens is ecstatic to get to work with defensemen like Ryan Suter and Jared Spurgeon and hopes to help mold Jonas Brodin, Marco Scandella and Matt Dumba into consistent NHLers. Suter and Spurgeon are coming off solid years, but the Wild need more from Brodin, Scandella and Dumba.

GOALTENDING Devan Dubnyk was a one-man show after arriving from Arizona two years ago. He started 38 consecutive games, won 27 (15 on the road) and had no consecutive regulation losses. His extraordinary second half earned him a Masterton Trophy, a Vezina nomination and a six-year, $26-million deal. Last season, he won only five more games in 27 more starts and had a 3.34 goals-against average and .877 save percentage in a first-round loss to Dallas.

SPECIAL TEAMS The Wild's bread and butter is usually the penalty kill, but one season after having the NHL's best, they sunk nearly to the bottom of the ranks. They want to be more aggressive, and Stevens will help. Boudreau and assistant John Anderson will revamp the power play, but they'll need buy-in from the veterans. Suter has to be less predictable, and Mike Reilly and Dumba could help in that area.

INTANGIBLES As usual, Minnesota will bank on internal improvement after making the playoffs four consecutive seasons. Boudreau believes the Wild have the depth up front that will allow at a minimum three lines that can score. His high-octane, aggressive system could make the difference for a team that's traditionally defense-oriented.

ROOKIES Minnesota fans have been patiently waiting for 6-foot-5 Tyler Graovac, who led AHL Iowa in scoring two years ago. He made the Wild out of training camp but abruptly aggravated an abdominal injury opening night and required surgery. He'd have to pass through waivers to be sent down, so he should make the club.

X-FACTOR Two seasons ago, Zucker was on a 30-plus-goal pace before breaking his collarbone. He had 13 goals and 10 assists in 71 games last season, which he vows to improve upon. If Zucker takes advantage of a top-six role, he'll be a weapon.

THE BRASS The best-kept secret in the organization is Fletcher's contract status, but this is his eighth season as GM, and the Wild have won two playoff series and haven't advanced past the second round under his guidance. He has hired three full-time head coaches, spent a lot of money along the way and hyped the youngsters. The pressure is absolutely on Fletcher.

FUTURE WATCH

1 JOEL ERIKSSON-EK, LW
AGE 19 TEAM Farjestad (Swe.)
No real weaknesses. Good shot, big and strong, two-way player with a nose for the net.

2 ALEX TUCH, RW
AGE 20 TEAM Boston College (HE)
A point-producing, playmaking power forward with soft hands and a good shot.

3 LUKE KUNIN, C
AGE 18 TEAM Wisconsin (Big Ten)
A natural scorer and hard worker. Accurate shooter, but could be a more explosive skater.

4 GUSTAV OLOFSSON, D
AGE 21 TEAM Iowa (AHL)
A smart, mobile player with good size. A classic stay-at-home defenseman.

5 MIKE REILLY, D
AGE 23 TEAM Iowa (AHL)
A dynamic offensive force and power play specialist. Still a defensive liability, but improving.
ACQUIRED Free agent, July 2015 NHL '16-17

6 JORDAN GREENWAY, LW
AGE 19 TEAM Boston University (HE)
A big (6-foot-5) power forward who can be a top-six guy once he refines his skills.
ACQUIRED 50th overall, 2015 NHL '20-21

7 KIRILL KAPRIZOV, LW
AGE 19 TEAM Novokuznetsk (KHL)
Proved he can contribute at the pro level, but still needs to improve. Size may limit him.

8 TYLER GRAOVAC, C
AGE 23 TEAM Iowa (AHL)
Development has been slowed by injuries, but he's been a consistent scorer at AHL level.

9 LOUIS BELPEDIO, D
AGE 20 TEAM Miami (NCHC)
Good leader who moves the puck well. As a smaller player, he'll have to bulk up.

10 CARSON SOUCY, D
AGE 22 TEAM Minn-Duluth (NCHC)
Big, strong blueliner plays with an edge. Offensive abilities beginning to emerge.
ACQUIRED 137th overall, 2013 NHL '19-20

SCOUTING REPORT
Kunin put up a great amount of points on a bad team, but he'll get more help this season as the Badgers re-load. A high-energy player who can do a bit of everything, college is a good challenge for him.

MONTREAL CANADIENS

BY PAT HICKEY

After the quickest start in team history, the Montreal Canadiens went into the worst tailspin in team history when goaltender Carey Price sustained a knee injury that proved to be season-ending. The good news is, according to Price, he's 100-percent healthy. That alone makes the Canadiens a playoff threat. GM Marc Bergevin did the unthinkable when he traded fan-favorite P.K. Subban, but Shea Weber is bigger, will be a better fit in coach Michel Therrien's system and has a lower profile than the flamboyant Subban. Bergevin signed Alexander Radulov to a one-year deal, gambling marriage and fatherhood have sparked maturation in him. The Habs also added grit by trading for Andrew Shaw. He's pencilled in as the third-line center but may be called on to fill in a top-six wing role.

OFFENSE There's a myth the Canadiens can't score, but they ranked No. 2 in offense before Price was injured. Alex Galchenyuk will start at center and he'll stay there. He's coming off a breakthrough 30-goal season. He'll be joined on the top line by 30-goal scorer Max Pacioretty and either Brendan Gallagher or Radulov. Gallagher, who had 19 goals in only 53 games, has demonstrated chemistry with his linemates, and Radulov, a three-time KHL scoring champion, may get more chances playing on a line with veteran Tomas Plekanec. The challenge will be to find a fit on left wing on the Plekanec line. Weber will add some offense: he had 20 goals last season and led all defensemen with 14 on the power play.

DEFENSE Bergevin believes you can never have too many defensemen, and injuries forced the Canadiens to use a team record 15 last season. The D-corps is bigger and stronger, but it is also older. Therrien must find a way to limit the strain on Andrei Markov, who turns 38 in December. A healthy Jeff Petry will be a plus, and Nathan Beaulieu, Greg Pateryn and Mark Barberio will be asked to take on larger roles if Therrien hopes to employ an up-tempo style.

GOALTENDING A healthy Price is the best goaltender in the game, but he has been injured in three of the past four seasons. The original prognosis was for him to miss six weeks, and the Canadiens gambled on Mike Condon. He played a career-high 55 games, which was too great a burden on a rookie. Bergevin remedied the situation by signing veteran Al Montoya, who was solid in 25 games backing up Roberto Luongo with the Florida Panthers.

SPECIAL TEAMS Kirk Muller is coming back to run the power play, which will get a boost with the additions of Weber, Radulov and Shaw. In Muller's previous stint as an assistant coach, the Canadiens' power play was either the best or second best in the Eastern Conference in four of his five seasons. In 2015-16, the Canadiens were sixth worst in the league and surrendered 11 shorthanded goals. Montreal fared better on the penalty kill and scored eight shorthanded goals. The team added Shaw but lost two capable penalty killers in Lars Eller and Dale Weise. That means Therrien will continue to rely on Tomas Plekanec and Pacioretty, and those extra minutes take their toll.

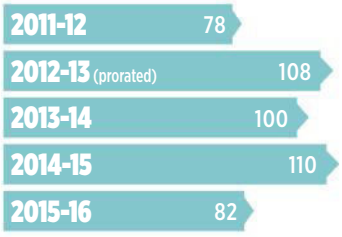
Regular Season Points



INTANGIBLES The leadership core was exposed after Price was injured. The arrival of Weber provides a proven leader. He wore the 'C' in Nashville and was last year's winner of the Mark Messier NHL Leadership Award. The Nashville Predators qualified for the playoffs in four of Weber's six seasons as captain.

ROOKIES Charles Hudon and Michael McCarron posted solid AHL totals and will push for jobs, as will Nikita Scherbak. Artturi Lehkonen and Martin Reway will compete for a top-six left wing spot. Lehkonen has a slight edge in size and plays better defense. Mikhail Sergachev, drafted ninth overall this June, is physically ready for NHL blueline duty, but he'll likely return to junior.

X-FACTOR The supporting cast has improved, but Montreal's collapse emphasized the point that the Canadiens will only go as far as Price carries them. Weber will discourage opponents from running his goaltender, but it remains to be seen whether Price's wonky knees hold up.

THE BRASS Bergevin and Therrien share a belief that defense produces winning teams, and their futures are riding on a healthy Price. Bergevin didn't win many fans by trading Subban, and there will be pressure on Therrien if the Canadiens don't get off to a good start.

FUTURE WATCH

1 MIKHAIL SERGACHEV, D
AGE 18 TEAM Windsor (OHL)
NHL-ready size and skill. A great skater who played a ton of minutes in junior.

2 MICHAEL MCCARRON, RW
AGE 21 TEAM St. John's (AHL)
A punishing physical player with good size who creates chances by driving the net.

3 NOAH JUULSEN, D
AGE 19 TEAM Everett (WHL)
A smooth skater who excels at separating opponents from the puck. At times undisciplined.

4 NIKITA SCHERBAK, RW
AGE 20 TEAM St. John's (AHL)
A quick, agile winger with fancy stickwork and a hard, accurate shot. Defense has improved.

5 JACOB DE LA ROSE, C
AGE 21 TEAM St. John's (AHL)
An excellent shutdown player who can read and break up offensive plays.

6 ZACH FUCALE, G
AGE 21 TEAM St. John's (AHL)
Calm and confident in goal, he handled a larger than expected workload last season.

7 CHARLES HUDON, LW
AGE 22 TEAM St. John's (AHL)
A threat to score whenever he touches the puck. Improved defensively, but isn't there yet.

8 ARTTURI LEHKONEN, LW
AGE 21 TEAM Frolunda (Swe.)
A natural scorer with tremendous speed who isn't afraid to battle for pucks in the corner.
ACQUIRED 55th overall, 2013 NHL '18-19

9 WILL BITTEN, C
AGE 18 TEAM Flint (OHL)
Great skater who plays a 200-foot game. Reads plays well and is creative offensively.
ACQUIRED 70th overall, 2016 NHL '20-21

10 LUKAS VEJDEMO, C
AGE 20 TEAM Djurgarden (Swe.)
Hard-working and disciplined defensively. Good speed and shot, but not a goal-scorer.

NASHVILLE PREDATORS

BY DAVID BOCLAIR

The Nashville Predators have barely been around long enough to have traditions. Yet recently the organization has turned away from two of its most prominent ones: an unyielding devotion to the draft and a defense-first style of play.

Increasingly, the Predators have looked to the trade market rather than waiting on prospects to develop. The June blockbuster in which they traded Shea Weber for P.K. Subban came five months after dealing Seth Jones for Ryan Johansen. And Nashville's leader in goals and points each of the past two seasons, Filip Forsberg, was acquired in a 2013 deadline deal with the Washington Capitals. These are now the Go Go Predators. They still rely heavily on a steady blueline – only now, it's a young, fast and mobile group, anchored by the offensively adept Subban and Roman Josi.

OFFENSE Conditioning is at the center (literally) of Nashville's attempts to become more dangerous on the attack. Johansen is the first true No. 1 center in franchise history, and his skills are obvious, but he has yet to show a willingness to get himself in the kind of shape for him to compete hard every shift. Mike Ribeiro is the first choice to center the second line, but management has challenged the 36-year-old to improve his fitness after his play waned late (no goals, three assists in the final 14 games) and he was scratched for a couple playoff contests. The primary job for both is creating scoring opportunities for Forsberg, James Neal and Craig Smith, the team's top-three goal scorers each of the past two seasons.

DEFENSE The brass believes their top four is the NHL's best. It almost certainly is the most mobile. With Josi, Subban, Mattias Ekholm and Ryan Ellis, Nashville has four players who can join the rush or carry the puck to quickly transition and outnumber opponents. They're not a physically intimidating bunch, especially with Weber out the door. Instead, they rely on speed and positioning in their own end. The question is how – or if – all those similar parts fit together. To that end, the addition of Yannick Weber is notable because he has played with Josi on Switzerland's national team. He's a proven option if Josi and Subban can't mesh.

GOALTENDING Pekka Rinne's health issues are behind him. The 33-year-old played 130 games over the past two seasons, including 66 (the second-highest total of his career) in 2015-16, and there is no reason to think he won't maintain that pace. There will be a newcomer behind him on the depth chart, though. Prospects Marek Mazanec and Juuse Saros will battle for the No. 2 job in camp. Both will likely see the net at some point this season.

SPECIAL TEAMS Weber's slapshot was the primary power play weapon, and everything was built around it. Subban shoots with comparable power, but he is harder for penalty killers to track because he isn't a stationary target. That'll make the power play less predictable. Weber led all NHL defensemen with 14 power play goals, though, while Subban had only two. The penalty kill hasn't been as effective in recent seasons, and now there are no sturdy, shutdown defensemen to occupy space. Opponents will find room to operate.

INTANGIBLES The franchise decided speed is necessary to win a Stanley Cup, and it has compiled as much as possible at every position. The roster will likely include 16 players 26 or younger. There will be deficiencies in some areas, but the Preds believe they can stay ahead of the competition most nights and maybe (finally) take the next step in the post-season.

ROOKIES Kevin Fiala, drafted 11th overall in 2014, posted 50 points in AHL Milwaukee and could make the jump. Colton Sissons, Austin Watson, Viktor Arvidsson and Miikka Salomaki each played between 34 and 61 games last season, so they're not rookies, but they're 24 or younger and will get the chance to play expanded roles.

X-FACTOR Colin Wilson was one of Nashville's best players in the past two post-seasons (10 goals, eight assists in 20 games). In between, he had just six goals and 18 assists during 2015-16. He has always been streaky and hasn't quite reached his potential since being drafted seventh overall in 2008.

THE BRASS David Poile is 66 and has been an NHL GM since 1982. He has had one team reach the conference final, and that one got swept once it got there. His recent willingness to make big trades suggests he's losing patience and sees few remaining opportunities to pursue a Cup.

NEW JERSEY DEVILS

BY ANDREW GROSS

Year 1 under GM Ray Shero and coach John Hynes – who drew raves from the players for his up-tempo, enthusiastic style – generated optimism for the future, but it was ultimately a disappointment as the New Jersey Devils missed the playoffs for the fourth straight season.

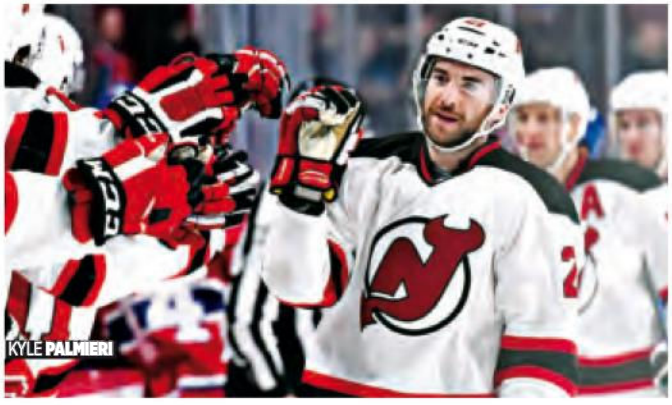
Issue No. 1 was an inability to score. They were last in the NHL in goals per game and last with just 109 goals scored 5-on-5, 11 fewer than the 29th-place Toronto Maple Leafs. But the acquisition of Taylor Hall now gives the Devils a legitimate offensive duo with Adam Henrique, his former linemate with the OHL's Windsor Spitfires. That, plus the infusion of some talented prospects, makes the Devils a team with a brighter future under the Shero-Hynes regime.

OFFENSE Along with Hall, who will be counted on to crack the 30-goal barrier for the first time, and Henrique, who notched a career-high 30 goals to go along with 20 assists, New Jersey native Kyle Palmieri will be key to the attack. He set career highs with 30 goals and 27 assists after being acquired from the Anaheim Ducks.

FRANCOIS LACASSE/NHLI VIA GETTY IMAGES

A healthy Mike Cammalleri and increased production from Travis Zajac will help the top six, and a full season of Devante Smith-Pelly, who had eight goals and five assists in 18 games after being acquired from the Montreal Canadiens, will bolster the depth and help the Devils toward their vision of being a four-line team. On the blueline, Damon Severson, John Moore and Andy Greene, who combined for just nine goals and 53 points, need to up their offensive production.

DEFENSE Hynes must find a new top-pair partner for the workhorse Greene after shipping Adam Larsson to the Edmonton Oilers for Hall. Ben Lovejoy, signed as a free agent after winning the Stanley Cup with the Pittsburgh Penguins, adds grit and a hard point shot but can't be viewed as a straight replacement for Larsson. The Devils still try to muck up the neutral zone, though they don't trap as blatantly as during their heyday from 1995 to 2003. They were content in low-scoring games, given their lack of production and Cory Schneider's goaltending. This season, though, the 'D' will be pushed to move the puck faster as New Jersey hopes to be better in transition.



KYLE PALMIERI

GOALTENDING Schneider (2.15 goals-against average, .924 save percentage) was easily the most crucial player for a team that finished 12 points out of a wild card spot. Entering his third season as the team's No. 1, Schneider has made the transition from Devils' icon Martin Brodeur relatively seamless. The solid Keith Kinkaid enters his third season as Schneider's understudy.

SPECIAL TEAMS Although they struggled to score at even strength, the Devils' power play was a team strength, finishing in the top third of the league. Adding Hall to Palmieri (11 goals, 12 assists) and Zajac (six goals, 11 assists) will make the man advantage even more dangerous. But New Jersey needs more from its defensemen and is toying with increasing Greene's power play minutes. It's a fine balance, though, as Greene also leads the penalty kill, which finished among the top 10 as well.

INTANGIBLES Lovejoy expects to be a leader and help teach his younger teammates, and his Cup ring gives him instant credibility. There is a sense of optimism permeating the organization. A solid start with increased goal output would go a long way toward team confidence.

ROOKIES Pavel Zacha, the sixth-overall pick in 2015, and Miles Wood, a fourth-rounder in 2013, plus Steven Santini, a second-rounder in 2013, all made their NHL debuts in the season finale and will vie for spots. Joshua Jacobs, a second-round pick in 2014, also has a shot.

X-FACTOR Hall has the potential – and the burden – of being a franchise-altering player. Not since Ilya Kovalchuk and Zach Parise have the Devils had a true offensive star in the prime of his career. Hall comes to New Jersey, in his words, "very motivated," because Edmonton chose to deal him in search of a turnaround.

THE BRASS Shero, through trades, free agency and two drafts, has shown a blueprint for rebuilding, and Hynes quickly won over his players, who gave him a hard-working effort all season. Shero has cherry-picked what he can from the Penguins' organization, acquiring Beau Bennett, signing Lovejoy and hiring Hynes. Now Hynes must translate the improvements into a faster-paced attack.

PAVEL ZACHA

FUTURE WATCH

1 PAVEL ZACHA, C
AGE 19 TEAM Sarnia (OHL)
Drafted as a center, he may ultimately be viewed as a strong, skilled power forward.

2 MICHAEL MCLEOD, C
AGE 18 TEAM Mississauga (OHL)
Strong, powerful skater more of a playmaker. Very adept in the faceoff circle.

3 STEVE SANTINI, D
AGE 21 TEAM Boston College (HE)
He's a physical presence, a mobile stay-at-home D-man and a shot blocker.

4 JOSEPH BLANDISI, LW
AGE 22 TEAM Albany (AHL)
He fits the remodeled Devils' mold: speed up the wing and a willingness to go the net.
ACQUIRED Free agent, Jan., 2015 NHL '16-17

5 MACKENZIE BLACKWOOD, G
AGE 19 TEAM Barrie (OHL)
In addition to his size, his athleticism and demeanor are most impressive to scouts.

6 REID BOUCHER, LW
AGE 23 TEAM Albany (AHL)
A crafty producer at every level. Just needs to up his game another notch.

7 JOHN QUENNEVILLE , C
AGE 20 TEAM Brandon (WHL)
He may be better suited to playing the wing at the next level. Smart and skilled.

8 NATHAN BASTIAN, RW
AGE 18 TEAM Mississauga (OHL)
Hard worker along the boards and a net presence. Skating needs some work.

9 JOSHUA JACOBS, D

10 MILES WOOD, LW
Left NCAA after freshman season to turn pro. Plays fast, aggressive style.

SCOUTING REPORT
Speed and power are McLeod's hallmarks, as he blazes down the ice like few others. Competitive and skilled, he was hobbled by a couple late injuries, which may have explained a so-so world under-18s showing.

NEW YORK ISLANDERS

BY MICHAEL WILLHOFT

The New York Islanders relocated from Uniondale to Brooklyn, but they didn't slow their progress toward becoming a Stanley Cup contender along the way.

The Islanders built on a strong 2014-15 season by topping 100 points for the second straight year and winning their first playoff series since 1993. They played their way to a 25-11-5 record in their new building, good for fourth-best in the Eastern Conference. Concerns over ice conditions and a longer commute to the rink on game days should subside in the team's second season at Barclays Center.

Expectations are high ahead of 2016-17, and it will be a decidedly new-look team that will have to live up to them. After losing longtime core players Kyle Okposo, Frans Nielsen and Matt Martin to free agency, New York signed Andrew Ladd, Jason Chimera and P-A Parenteau to its maturing roster.

OFFENSE John Tavares will center the top unit between Ladd and Parenteau. The Islanders know the goals will come from that line – Ladd is a 25-goal scorer and Parenteau played on Tavares' wing in his first go-around with the team – but there are question marks beneath it. Can Brock Nelson fill Nielsen's spot as the second-line center? Can Mikhail Grabovski stay healthy? Can Josh Bailey and Nikolay Kulemin fend off competition for ice time, especially on special teams? Is prospect Mathew Barzal ready for the NHL? The Islanders saw a drop in their overall possession numbers, and returning to their 2014-15 form is critical to challenge for the division crown.

DEFENSE New York wants to play an up-tempo style, and the defense has its share of strong-skating puck-movers. Calvin de Haan, Travis Hamonic and Nick Leddy were all solid possession drivers last season, facilitating breakouts and activating on the rush. Johnny Boychuk and Thomas Hickey dipped Corsi-wise but still posted respectable point totals. The insertion of Adam Pelech and Ryan Pulock will bolster the group. Both proved they could handle NHL minutes in limited action.

GOALTENDING The goaltending triumvirate of Jaroslav Halak, Thomas Greiss and J-F Berube poses a numbers problem. Halak played well before sustaining a season-ending groin injury in March, but Greiss took over the No. 1 job and had a career year, winning 23 games and posting a .925 save percentage. To further complicate things, the organization is high on Berube. With limited cap space, GM Garth Snow might look to trade Halak's $4.5-million cap hit, though that's easier said than done. Plus, relying on a Greiss-Berube tandem is risky given Greiss has limited starter credentials and Berube is unproven.

SPECIAL TEAMS The power play was middling, while the penalty kill was one of the team's strengths. Both units will see major changes in personnel. The departures of Nielsen and Okposo will hurt, but the additions of Chimera, Ladd and Parenteau may offset those losses. A healthy Anders Lee will park himself in front of the net on the top power play unit, screening and creating shooting opportunities for Leddy or Boychuk from the point and Tavares from the half-wall. On the penalty kill, the Islanders will likely continue implementing press coverage with forwards switching at the top of the zone to harass the puck carrier, while the defensemen stay at home down low.

INTANGIBLES These Isles are a tight-knit bunch, so it will be interesting to see how Chimera, Ladd and Parenteau fit in. This is still Tavares's team, though Hamonic is an emotional leader on the ice and in the dressing room, but the additions of a few more veterans won't hurt the dynamic.

ROOKIES Barzal has the most realistic shot at sticking. He had a strong training camp last year, and he'll push hard for a roster spot. Michael Dal Colle and Joshua Ho-Sang will be in the mix as well but will probably start with AHL Bridgeport.

X-FACTOR For the Islanders to take the next step, they need their youth to break out. Lee, Nelson and Ryan Strome will have to produce, because without sizable contributions from them, New York won't enter the conversation as one of the East's top teams.

THE BRASS Charles Wang officially ceded control of the club to Jon Ledecky and Scott Malkin July 1, ending his 16-year tenure as majority owner. Ledecky and Malkin issued a statement expressing their full confidence in Snow and coach Jack Capuano, ensuring continuity behind the bench and in the front office.

FUTURE WATCH

1 MATHEW BARZAL, C
AGE 19 TEAM Seattle (WHL)
More of a playmaker than a goal scorer. An elite level skater with a lot of quickness.

2 RYAN PULOCK, D
AGE 21 TEAM Bridgeport (AHL)
Possesses booming slapshot and has the ability to quarterback the power play.

3 KIEFFER BELLOWS, LW
AGE 18 TEAM U.S. NTDP (USHL)
Skilled power forward can dominate games. Also possesses high-end puckhandling.

4 MICHAEL DAL COLLE, LW
AGE 20 TEAM Kingston (OHL)
Finished well after rough start to final junior year. Great puck protection ability.

5 ILYA SOROKIN, G
AGE 21 TEAM CSKA Moscow (KHL)
Moves well and has great athleticism. Put up stunning numbers right through playoffs.

6 LINUS SODERSTROM, G
AGE 20 TEAM Vita Hasten (Swe.)
Has battled through various challenges, but has impressed with his work ethic and focus.
ACQUIRED 95th overall, 2014 NHL '20-21

7 ANTHONY BEAUVILLIER, LW
AGE 19 TEAM Shawinigan (QMJHL)
Leader and offensive catalyst needs to work on his defensive consistency.

8 DEVON TOEWS, D
AGE 22 TEAM Quinnipiac (ECAC)
He's slightly undersized by NHL standards, but his playmaking abilities are super-sized.

9 DOYLE SOMERBY, D
AGE 22 TEAM Boston University (HE)
The large defenseman who skates well has some upside if he can refine his overall skills.

10 JOSH HO-SANG, RW
AGE 20 TEAM Niagara (OHL)
Confidence has made him controversial. Has the ability to put up multi-point games.

SCOUTING REPORT
One of the most dangerous offensive players in the draft, Bellows has a killer shot that comes from a great release. He still needs to hammer out the rest of his game, but suiting up for Boston U. will help that.

NEW YORK RANGERS

BY STEVE ZIPAY

It was never about the regular season for the 2015-16 New York Rangers, who had gone deep into the playoffs in three of the previous four campaigns. Even with 101 points, a first-round dispatching by the Pittsburgh Penguins was a blow that left the Rangers bloodied, a wound the franchise intends to stanch quickly. But is a single off-season reset possible?

Fans were troubled by a mediocre second half, which included a penchant for blown leads and a leaky D-corps that never consistently got the puck to the forwards. But expectations have been tempered. Facing cap constraints, GM Jeff Gorton went to the bargain rack when free agency opened, signing speedsters Michael Grabner and Nathan Gerbe. He then dealt Derick Brassard to the Ottawa Senators for Mika Zibanejad in a sign that change could be coming – Zibanejad is nearly six years younger, and the Rangers, who have stripped the prospect cupboard all but bare, picked up a second-rounder in the deal, too.

OFFENSE The Blueshirts were among the league leaders in goals, but that may be deceptive, as they were a lowly 26th in shots. Five players had 20 or more goals – Brassard, Derek Stepan, Mats Zuccarello, J.T. Miller and Chris Kreider – but there was no sniper, no difference-maker. Rick Nash, who scored 42 goals in 2014-15, was sidelined for almost two months and finished with 15. Kevin Hayes potted just 14. Rookie Pavel Buchnevich is being counted on to bring some juice to the top nine, but he's more of a playmaker than a shooter. Oscar Lindberg, who will be out until November after hip surgery, is promising. With Keith Yandle gone to the Florida Panthers, there is no real offensive force from the back end, unless Ryan McDonagh stays healthy.

DEFENSE The blueline was often woefully out of position, chasing pucks and leaving shooters open in dangerous areas. Dan Boyle (who is gone) and Dan Girardi, were the main culprits. Stay-at-home Nick Holden, 29, who arrived from Colorado, and Brady Skjei, the team's top 'D' prospect, who averaged 17:44 in seven games, are expected to step in. Bounce-back seasons from McDonagh and Marc Staal won't hurt.

RYAN MCDONAGH

GOALTENDING At 34, is Henrik Lundqvist showing his age? The defense forced him to face a bushel of breakaways and odd-man rushes, along with 1,944 shots, the most he's faced since 2010-11, but 'King Henrik' struggled late in the season. His body of work suggests he'll rebound, and he should play fewer games because of the condensed schedule. Capable backup Antti Raanta was inked to a two-year deal.

SPECIAL TEAMS Grabner and Gerbe were targeted to replace Dominic Moore and Viktor Stalberg on the penalty kill, which plummeted from sixth to 26th. Grabner was a top forward in ice time killing penalties with the Toronto Maple Leafs and has 12 shorthanded goals since 2009-10. Gerbe also has a stellar shorthanded resume. There's no immediate replacement for Yandle's contributions on the power play. Buchnevich may get a look on the point.

INTANGIBLES After three long playoff runs, did the early summer help the Rangers' core rest and regroup? Can Vigneault and the on-ice leadership reverse some inexplicably listless first periods and fragility when momentum shifts? Will a long home stretch at the start of the season be beneficial?

ROOKIES The smooth-skating Skjei, a first-round pick in 2012, can play both sides and may end up in the top four. He and Buchnevich, who moved to New York from Russia this summer to begin training and learning English from a tutor, appear to be locks for opening night.

X-FACTOR Lundqvist and Nash both regressed, as did Hayes. Nash, who missed two months with a deep bone bruise and was the subject of summer trade rumors, has to double his 15 goals. Nicklas Jensen, Malte Stromwall and Ryan Graves could have an impact.

THE BRASS Vigneault is 144-80-22 as he enters the fourth of a five-year contract. Given the pressure to rebound, he could be walking the tightrope. To some extent, Gorton has his hands tied by long-term deals with no-trade or no-move clauses inherited from now-president Glen Sather, plus trades that sent first-round picks packing. But don't be shocked by a big swap at the trade deadline.

OTTAWA SENATORS

BY BRUCE GARRIOCH

It was a summer of change for the Ottawa Senators, though mostly off the ice. Only 24 hours after a disappointing finish, longtime GM Bryan Murray decided it was time to hand over the reins to assistant Pierre Dorion, who moved quickly by firing coach Dave Cameron and his assistants Andre Tourigny and Rick Wamsley, while Jason Smith turned down an offer to stay in a development role. After an exhaustive search, former Tampa Bay Lightning coach Guy Boucher was installed as the Ottawa's new bench boss, while veteran NHL coach Marc Crawford was brought in as an associate.

The Senators feel good about their roster and opted not for a major overhaul. But they did make a significant move in dealing Mika Zibanejad to the New York Rangers for Derick Brassard – a signal from management that Ottawa is in win-now mode. Former Senator Chris Kelly was brought back via free agency to improve the bottom six.

OFFENSE If Kyle Turris (ankle) and Clarke MacArthur (concussion) can both stay healthy, Dorion is confident this group will be fine. If they do, he believes his club has the chance to have nine 20-goal scorers up front, and Mike Hoffman has proven in back-to-back years he can regularly turn the red light on. The Senators did a lot of off-season work with Bobby Ryan because they want to see more consistency in his game. Mark Stone comes off a strong performance for Canada at the World Championship and has shown he still has room to improve. In 21-year-olds Nick Paul and Curtis Lazar, there is offensive ability yet to be unearthed.

DEFENSE Many believe captain Erik Karlsson, who had 16 goals and 82 points, should have won his third Norris Trophy as the league's top blueliner, but the vote didn't go his way. He is the team's engine at both ends of the rink. While he's been criticized for the chances he takes, his defensive play has improved, and he's formed tremendous chemistry with blueline partner Marc Methot. The addition of Dion Phaneuf from the Toronto Maple Leafs gave the club a solid second pair with budding Cody Ceci. The Senators like the grit that Mark Borowiecki brings in the final pair, but who he'll play with remains unclear. Chris Wideman is under contract and will get a chance, along with Michael Kostka. Patrick Sieloff, acquired from Calgary in return for Alex Chiasson, is also a consideration.

GOALTENDING Craig Anderson was the club's best player many times in 2015-16, and he had to be. That can't change for Ottawa, but perhaps Boucher's approach will ease the strain on Anderson. Andrew Hammond was never able to live up to the hype after his historic stretch to get the club to the playoffs in 2015. He put up adequate numbers last season in the No. 2 role. Matt O'Connor had a shaky first pro season after being a prized free agent acquisition last summer. He will continue developing in AHL Binghamton.

SPECIAL TEAMS Both units underperformed, especially the power play, and particularly at home. That was a big reason why changes were made. A man advantage with Karlsson on the point should be among league's best, and the Senators certainly weren't, which is why Boucher will be relied on to get it going. The putrid penalty kill has to improve. The lone bright spot was Jean-Gabriel Pageau, who was a PK wizard for the Senators, leading the league with nine shorthanded points.

INTANGIBLES Boucher returns to North America after a hiatus in Europe. Is he going to be a better coach the second time around? He says he's learned from his experiences. He'll have to apply his principles quickly to yield early success, as expectations in Ottawa are to make the playoffs.

ROOKIES Thomas Chabot, the club's top pick in 2015, has a real shot to make the blueline. He had a strong year in Saint John of the QMJHL, and the Senators are excited about what he'll show in camp.

X-FACTOR Although they may lose the deal in the long term, the Senators are betting that Brassard, who turns 29 in September, is an upgrade up the middle over Zibanejad, who's still just 23. The acquisition of Phaneuf failed to spark a late-season playoff surge as hoped. But perhaps a full season with the solidified top four will stabilize team defense?

THE BRASS There is no shortage of pressure to make the playoffs, and that starts from owner Eugene Melnyk. He wants to see immediate results, and that's why the off-ice changes were made. Dorion and Boucher have to get this turned around quickly.

9 MATT O'CONNOR, G
AGE 24 TEAM Binghamton (AHL)
Rookie pro season started terribly, but he rounded into form. Tracks the puck well.
ACQUIRED Free agent, May , 2015 NHL '18-19

10 RYAN DZINGEL, LW
AGE 24 TEAM Binghamton (AHL)
Highly skilled forward with great vision. The speedster had a 30-game NHL trial last year.

2016 NO. 1 DRAFT PICK

POSITION

2015-16
WINDSOR SPITFIRES

SCOUTING REPORT
A quasi-local kid (born in St. Louis, but summers near Ottawa), Brown has a ton of potential thanks to his size and playmaking ability. He has already worked on shooting more; now he needs to get stronger.

PHILADELPHIA FLYERS

BY WAYNE FISH

Somewhere, former Philadelphia Flyers chairman Ed Snider must be smiling. The franchise's original owner passed away in April but lived long enough to see his – dare we say it – "pride and joy" qualify for an unexpected playoff appearance.

While Snider had been embracing second-year GM Ron Hextall's patient, build-from-within approach, it's no secret he was a win-now kind of guy. So maybe Snider left us believing the Flyers were a bit ahead of schedule in this deliberate approach to construct a championship team.

After an unexpected trip to the post-season, Hextall has made it clear he once again wants similar improvement. Financial issues prevented him from making significant upgrades, though he did add free agents Dale Weise and Boyd Gordon. Instead, he's counting on bounce-back seasons from Jakub Voracek, Claude Giroux and Steve Mason to supply the impetus for more surprising success.

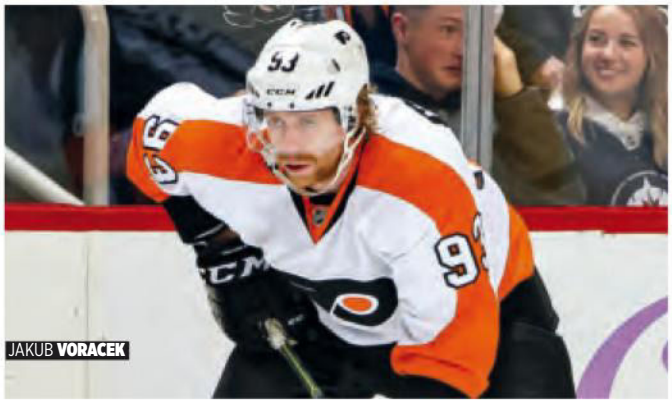
OFFENSE Giroux's 367 points leads Sidney Crosby by one point for most in the NHL over the past five seasons. Shayne Gostisbehere,

DARCY FINLEY/NHLI VIA GETTY IMAGES

the Calder Trophy runner-up, paced the Flyers' defensemen scoring. More secondary scoring is needed from players such as Sean Couturier (11 goals). Philadelphia scored its fewest number of goals since 2002-03. A better grasp of coach Dave Hakstol's system will help, and a full season with Gostisbehere offers more hope.

DEFENSE The Flyers played a lot of tight, one-goal games, and team defense played a role in that. Philadelphia doesn't seem to mind taking low-scoring games down to the wire. That said, the Flyers finished with a goal differential of minus-4, one of only two teams (the Detroit Red Wings were the other) to make the playoffs with a number in the red. When paired together, Mark Streit and Nick Schultz are as close to a shutdown defense tandem as the Flyers have. Ivan Provorov, drafted seventh overall in 2015, is the their top defense prospect and could force his way into the lineup at 19.

GOALTENDING There are those who say if you have two No. 1 goaltenders, you don't have any, but the Flyers beg to differ. Both Steve Mason and Michal Neuvirth are going into contract years, and Hextall says he won't sign either until the season is over, so there's plenty of incentive for each of them. Mason makes $4.1 million, so he's the No. 1 on paper. But Neuvirth ($1.6 million) played out of his mind in the playoffs and looks like he's ready to challenge for the top spot.



JAKUB VORACEK

SPECIAL TEAMS While the Flyers' once-vaunted power play didn't tumble over a cliff, they did fall to 11th, a far cry from previous seasons (third in 2014-15 and fifth in 2013-14). Adding Gostisbehere improved the man advantage in the second half. Brayden Schenn, Wayne Simmonds and Giroux continue to click, and a return to form by Voracek would be a plus. The penalty kill failed in big moments. A better Matt Read and the addition of Gordon will help there.

INTANGIBLES Hextall believes Hakstol's second training camp will be much more productive, and the team will be able to avoid its annual slow start. Captain Giroux took a much more proactive approach to leadership last season. Simmonds and Streit have strong hockey minds, plus experience, to serve Giroux well as alternates.

ROOKIES Big things are expected of blue-chip prospect Provorov. He lit up the World Junior Championship and the WHL with his two-way excellence and bettered his production after his draft season. Another possibility is Travis Konecny, a speedster drafted 25th overall in 2015 who doesn't have an ounce of doubt in his game. Taylor Leier had a six-game NHL audition and a 20-goal season in the AHL.

X-FACTOR An even stricter adherence to Hakstol's tactics can produce better results. The Flyers did this in the second half, crafted one of the best records in the NHL and hopped over a handful of teams to make the playoffs.

THE BRASS Hakstol, the first college coach to jump to the NHL in some 30 years, made believers out of doubters with his no-nonsense approach. Look for nothing to change as he continues to learn the pro game. With the Snider era over, the ownership picture becomes cloudy. But Hextall, Paul Holmgren and Bob Clarke vow to push on with the same traditional, aggressive attitude that has fuelled the Flyers' throughout their 50 years.

FUTURE WATCH

1 IVAN PROVOROV, D
AGE 19 TEAM Brandon (WHL)
Well-rounded defender plays a 200-foot game. Great skater and very smart.

2 TRAVIS SANHEIM, D
AGE 20 TEAM Calgary (WHL)
Impact player at both ends of the ice, he has to get stronger before jumping to the NHL.

3 GERMAN RUBTSOV, C
AGE 18 TEAM Team Russia (Jr.)
Well developed defensively and an elite skater. Versatile enough to play all over the lineup.

4 TRAVIS KONECNY, C
AGE 19 TEAM Sarnia (OHL)
High-character player who makes things happen. Needs to watch the turnovers.

5 SAMUEL MORIN, D
AGE 21 TEAM Lehigh Valley (AHL)
A pillar defensively who matches up against opponent's top players. Close to NHL-ready.

6 PASCAL LABERGE, C
AGE 18 TEAM Victoriaville (QMJHL)
A tough, in-your-face player who causes havoc. Dangerous in the offensive zone.
ACQUIRED 36th overall, 2016 NHL '19-20

7 ROBERT HAGG, D
AGE 21 TEAM Lehigh Valley (AHL)
Not dominant in any particular aspect, but no real weaknesses. Won't shy from rough stuff.

8 CARTER HART, G
AGE 18 TEAM Everett (WHL)
Technically sound goalie who is always square to shots. Mentally tough.
ACQUIRED 48th overall, 2016 NHL '21-22

9 ANTHONY STOLARZ, G
AGE 22 TEAM Lehigh Valley (AHL)
Big goalie (6-foot-5) who plays the butterfly. Challenges shooters. AHL all-star.

10 NICOLAS AUBE-KUBEL, RW
AGE 20 TEAM Val-d'Or (QMJHL)
High-energy player who can play in different roles and situations. Offense still developing.

SCOUTING REPORT
Rubtsov's season was built around the world under-18s, but a team drug scandal killed that opportunity. Nevertheless, the smart center skates well, hawks the puck and plays a great two-way game.

PITTSBURGH PENGUINS

BY SHELLY ANDERSON

Tellingly, the Pittsburgh Penguins' biggest signing at the start of free agency wasn't a player but the GM. Jim Rutherford re-upped after his guiding hand led the organization to its fourth Stanley Cup and its first since 2009.

The Penguins went through a season of transition but still managed to win a championship. Because of the moves Rutherford made in the 12 months before the Cup celebration – adding Phil Kessel, depth through four lines and speed, and switching to coach Mike Sullivan – he had the benefit of a quiet summer.

OFFENSE Questions about trading for Kessel last summer evaporated when he challenged for the Conn Smythe Trophy. The honor went instead to the captain, Sidney Crosby, who started the year with the worst offensive three months of his career but turned things around to finish third in league scoring with 85 points, followed by 19 in the playoffs. The Penguins found their identity – namely, speed smothered in confidence – and Rutherford bolstered it by trading for Carl Hagelin and Trevor Daley and promoting several AHLers. Led by Daley and Kris Letang, who had a career-high 67 points and 15 more in the playoffs, the defensemen provided a quick transition and jumped in on offense at will. Forward depth was evident, and the Pens boasted arguably the best top nine in the NHL when the emergence of the HBK line (Hagelin, Nick Bonino and Kessel) allowed them to put Crosby, Kessel and Evgeni Malkin on separate lines.

DEFENSE Letang, like Crosby, struggled before Sullivan replaced Mike Johnston in December, but he looked dominant thereafter. Although Olli Maatta floundered at times, coming off injury and illness absences, overall the defense was sound. Daley fit in perfectly. Brian Dumoulin emerged, and Ian Cole was solid in the playoffs after falling out of favor under Johnston. Ben Lovejoy left for New Jersey in free agency, but Rutherford pegged Derrick Pouliot, the 2012 eighth-overall pick, as ready for prime time.

GOALTENDING When franchise goalie Marc-Andre Fleury, who backstopped the club to the 2009 Stanley Cup, sustained his second concussion of the season, it opened the door for ice-in-his-veins rookie Matt Murray to step in and help the Penguins win it all. Both remain under contract, and Rutherford is comfortable entering 2016-17 with the tandem. Something will have to give, however, with the expansion draft looming next summer and teams only allowed to protect one goalie.

SPECIAL TEAMS Despite their overwhelming skill, the Penguins stumbled at times on the power play, which stuttered under a 20-percent success rate. They increased to a respectable 23.4 percent in the playoffs. All the key contributors return. Matt Cullen, who hadn't signed with anyone early in free agency, might be the only key penalty killer departing from a team that was one of the best in the league during the regular season at 84.1 percent and 85.1 percent in the post-season.

INTANGIBLES Crosby's first handoff of the Cup was to Daley, who missed the final because of a broken ankle and whose mother was in the last stages of a battle with cancer. It was one of many admirable gestures by Crosby, according to his teammates. As he overcame his frustrating start to the season, Crosby also rounded into the strongest leadership form of his career in a dressing room that grew close despite a mix of veterans and AHL call-ups.

ROOKIES Most of the young players who might have burst onto the scene this year already did so last season after a series of call-ups to the big club following Sullivan's promotion from the Penguins' AHL affiliate midway through the year. Those youngsters include Conor Sheary, Bryan Rust, Tom Kuhnhackl, Scott Wilson, Kevin Porter, Oskar Sundqvist and, of course, Murray. That leaves Daniel Sprong, Pittsburgh's top pick in 2015, but he is expected to miss at least half the season after shoulder surgery.

X-FACTOR With a mostly intact roster, the Penguins' biggest obstacle is the difficulty for any Cup winner to repeat. The last to do so was Detroit in 1997 and '98.

THE BRASS Cerebral, passionate and sometimes fiery, Sullivan seemed to command attention and respect from every player. His gut instinct – such as keeping the HBK line together – was right a lot more than it was wrong. His staff returns, as does Rutherford, who was named GM of the Year.

FUTURE WATCH

1 MATT MURRAY, G
AGE 22 TEAM W-B/Scranton (AHL)
If anyone has the mental fortitude to avoid a post-Stanley Cup letdown, it's him.
ACQUIRED 83rd overall, 2012 NHL '16-17

2 DERRICK POULIOT, D
AGE 22 TEAM W-B/Scranton (AHL)
He needs to do a better job in his own end, but his skating and vision are NHL ready.
ACQUIRED 8th overall, 2012 NHL '16-17

3 DANIEL SPRONG, RW
AGE 19 TEAM Charlottetown (QMJHL)
Great shooter must learn to play without the puck. Just had major shoulder surgery.

4 TRISTAN JARRY, G
AGE 21 TEAM W-B/Scranton (AHL)
He shattered expectations in his first pro season. Athletic and smooth for a big goalie.

5 FILIP GUSTAVSSON, G
AGE 18 TEAM Lulea Jr. (Swe.)
Swallows rebounds, quick post-to-post. Plays deep in his net. Long development in order.
ACQUIRED 55th overall, 2016 NHL '21-22

6 DOMINIK SIMON, RW
AGE 22 TEAM W-B/Scranton (AHL)
Gifted with an exceptional offensive skill set. Size may be the only thing he lacks.
ACQUIRED 137th overall, 2015 NHL '17-18

7 JAKE GUENTZEL, C
AGE 21 TEAM Nebraska-Omaha (NCHC)
Scored 14 points in 10 playoff games for Wilkes-Barre/Scranton after his collegiate season.

8 OSKAR SUNDQVIST, C
AGE 22 TEAM W-B/Scranton (AHL)
Good skill set for a two-way center. Offensive production will come with more experience.

9 SCOTT WILSON, LW
AGE 24 TEAM W-B/Scranton (AHL)
He's better when he plays with an edge. Proved last year he could put up points at AHL level.

10 ANTHONY ANGELLO, C
AGE 20 TEAM Cornell (ECAC)
A big, strong power forward who controls the puck down low. Impressed in freshman year.

PREDICTION 3RD in CENTRAL

ST. LOUIS BLUES

BY JEREMY RUTHERFORD

The St. Louis Blues' trip to the Western Conference final was their longest post-season run in 15 years. There is great hope to build on it, but that could be challenging with the turnover behind the bench and on the ice.

Ken Hitchcock is back for what he announced will be his swan song as an NHL bench boss. He'll be joined by coach-in-waiting Mike Yeo, who will be an associate before taking over in 2017-18, along with newcomers Rick Wilson and Steve Thomas.

Meanwhile, David Backes moved on, signing a five-year contract with the Boston Bruins, and the club lost Troy Brouwer to Calgary. The only response was bringing ex-Blue David Perron back into the fold. Those moves, along with the decision to deal Brian Elliott to the Flames and turn the net over to Jake Allen, have fans wondering if there's a legitimate chance for the club to pick up where it left off.

OFFENSE The Blues will look much different up front. They have some speed and skill with Robby Fabbri and offensive engine Vladimir Tarasenko, but they lost a lot of size and bite with the departures of Backes and Brouwer, who combined for 439 hits. Hitchcock hopes that with a smaller lineup the Blues can employ the tenacious style that Yeo's teams had during his five years with the Minnesota Wild. That remains to be seen, but with fewer hits causing turnovers, it will put more pressure on the Blues to play a stronger possession game and rely more on their puck-moving defense.

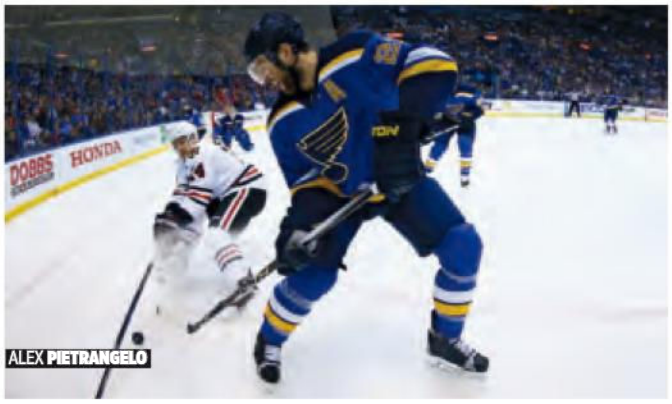
DEFENSE Alex Pietrangelo is the anchor on the blueline, and he's coming off arguably the best overall season of his career, finishing with 37 points while averaging a team-high 26:18 of ice time. Jay Bouwmeester, now just 10 games shy of 1,000, seems to be slowing. Kevin Shattenkirk had another 40-point season, but he was the subject of persistent trade rumors. To compensate, St. Louis may have to count on more from the bottom half of their defense. Colton Parayko and Joel Edmundson were solid as rookies a year ago, with Parayko putting up 33 points and Edmundson providing much-needed physicality. Veteran Carl Gunnarsson can also help take pressure off Pietrangelo.



GOALTENDING Elliott led the NHL in save percentage (.930) thus earning the nod in the post-season. But after Elliott backstopped the Blues to the third round, Armstrong dealt him to Calgary for draft picks. The club feels now is the time to hand off the reins to the 26-year-old Allen, who is 57-26-7 in 99 career appearances. He signed a four-year, $17.4-million extension.

SPECIAL TEAMS The two units were both among the league's best. But this area will be the most affected by the turnover, as Backes and Brouwer combined for 15 power play markers, and both were among team leaders in special teams ice time. Associate coach Brad Shaw instructed the penalty kill and is now in Columbus. Assistant Kirk Muller guided the power play and is back in Montreal.

INTANGIBLES A year ago, Hitchcock claimed the Blues had the best "spirit" of any team that he had coached. It helped overcome many deficiencies created by a rash of injuries. Two players responsible for bringing that spirit to the dressing room, Scottie Upshall and Kyle Brodziak, were re-signed, so that culture can carry forward. But chemistry is created on a season-to-season basis, and with captain Backes out the door, the vibe around the team is yet an unknown.

ROOKIES Any rookie will have a lot to live up to after the performances of Fabbri and Parayko. There isn't anyone of that ilk stepping in, but Ty Rattie, who has played 26 games over three seasons, could contribute.

X-FACTOR Many felt Hitchcock deserved a chance to come back, after taking the Blues to the Western Conference final, and believe Yeo as the next in line provides a smooth transition. Some are curious, though, whose lead the Blues will follow. If the team doesn't perform well, players could gravitate toward Yeo, who might take over sooner than expected.

THE BRASS GM Doug Armstrong stuck to his guns this off-season, retaining Hitchcock and hiring Yeo, and also declining to offer either Backes or Brouwer the term they desired. They were big-picture decisions that, especially in the cases of Backes and Brouwer, could have a short-term negative impact. But ownership has stayed behind Armstrong, and he continues to have the club's support and patience.

SAN JOSE SHARKS

BY DAVID POLLAK

Nobody outside the San Jose Sharks organization thought the team had a realistic chance of going deep in the playoffs last spring. Maybe that helped.

Lo and behold, the franchise shed its reputation as a post-season underachiever to reach the Stanley Cup final for the first time. There, the Sharks eventually fell to the Pittsburgh Penguins in six games, but even without the ultimate prize, they rekindled passion in a fan base that was losing faith. So now what?

San Jose couldn't match Pittsburgh's pace. While GM Doug Wilson wasn't ready to abandon the heavy game that helped conquer the Western Conference, his free agent signings of Mikkel Boedker and David Schlemko addressed the need for speed. A more confident Sharks team is inching toward the fast lane for the marathon that begins again in October.

OFFENSE Only three teams averaged more goals per game than the Sharks did. And offense will again be a strength, even if there's no certainty coach Pete DeBoer will stick with his top line of Joe Thornton (82 points), Joe Pavelski (78 points) and Tomas Hertl (46 points). Boedker could replace Hertl or skate alongside Logan Couture, whose 30 points were tops in the playoffs. Secondary scoring from the likes of Joel Ward (43 points) and rookie Joonas Donskoi (36 points) gave San Jose newfound depth. It's not only about the forwards, though, not with free-wheeling Brent Burns leading all defensemen in the league with 27 goals and finishing with 75 points, both career highs.

BRENT BURNS

DEFENSE Paired with Paul Martin, Burns saw his play without the puck improve significantly, earning him well-deserved recognition as a Norris Trophy finalist. But the Sharks still turn to the more-than-reliable Marc-Edouard Vlasic and Justin Braun as their shutdown duo and can point to their clampdown on St. Louis Blues sniper Vladimir Tarasenko in the conference final as evidence of their effectiveness under pressure. While newcomer Schlemko improves the third pairing's ability to move the puck, the departure of Roman Polak leaves Brenden Dillon as the team's only defenseman with serious snarl.

GOALTENDING Wilson gambled a year ago when he sent a first-round pick and a prospect to Boston for Martin Jones. It paid off big-time as Jones capped a strong season with a stellar playoff run (14 wins, 2.16 GAA, .923 save percentage). San Jose likely is still in the market for a backup, however, as James Reimer signed with the Florida Panthers and top prospect Aaron Dell may not be ready.

SPECIAL TEAMS San Jose's top power play unit may be the most dynamic in the NHL. When clicking, Thornton, Couture, Pavelski, Burns and Patrick Marleau have interchangeable roles and are in constant motion. The Sharks tied for second, then improved their efficiency in the playoffs. The penalty kill, however, was below average and slipped a little further during the post-season. Experience should help as Chris Tierney, who led San Jose forwards in shorthanded ice time, now has two seasons behind him.

PLAYOFF RECORD
25-22 (since 2012)

INTANGIBLES The Sharks inexplicably struggled at the SAP Center, finishing with a losing record while dominating on the road, where their 28-10-3 mark was the league's best. They went 8-4 at home in the playoffs, and they hope that carries over into 2016-17.

ROOKIES Timo Meier, the ninth-overall pick in the 2015 draft, only improved his stock by scoring 34 goals and 53 assists in 52 QMJHL games. Among prospects, the 6-foot-1, 209-pound native of Switzerland is the skater with the best chance of making the roster.

X-FACTOR The biggest uncertainty surrounding the Sharks may be Marleau, who's set to become an unrestricted free agent at the end of this season (as are Thornton and Burns). Marleau's status remained up in the air after persistent reports last year that he'd waive his no-movement clause for select destinations.

THE BRASS Owner Hasso Plattner's patience with his GM after the Sharks failed to make the playoffs in 2015 was rewarded. Wilson has been making all the right moves since then, especially his choice of DeBoer, who immediately had the team's ear behind the bench and juggled his personnel wisely. Both Wilson and DeBoer feel secure.

FUTURE WATCH

1 TIMO MEIER, RW
AGE 19 TEAM Rouyn-Noranda (QMJHL)
Big power forward uses his size and skating to create chances in the offensive zone.

2 MIRCO MUELLER, D
AGE 21 TEAM San Jose (AHL)
Took a step back to AHL to work on the details of his game. The experience helped.

3 NIKOLAY GOLDOBIN, LW
AGE 20 TEAM San Jose (AHL)
Lots of skill and hockey sense. Needs to learn when to make the simple plays.
ACQUIRED 27th overall, 2014 NHL '16-17

4 JEREMY ROY, D
AGE 19 TEAM Sherbrooke (QMJHL)
A drop in production last year can be attributed to a nagging ankle injury. Great passer.

5 NOAH ROD, RW
AGE 20 TEAM Geneve (Sui.)
Plays physical against top lines in the Swiss League. Showed his offensive side during WJC.

6 MAXIM LETUNOV, C
AGE 20 TEAM Connecticut (HE)
A dangerous offensive player, he will need to get bigger, stronger and more physical.
ACQUIRED From Ari, June 2016 NHL '18-19

7 JULIUS BERGMAN, D
AGE 20 TEAM San Jose (AHL)
A good player in all three zones, he plays with a physical edge. Discipline can be a issue.

8 KEVIN LABANC, RW
AGE 20 TEAM Barrie (OHL)
Averaged almost two points per game last season, winning the OHL scoring title.

9 DYLAN GAMBRELL, C
AGE 20 TEAM Denver (NCHC)
A high floor, low ceiling player who can be a solid bottom-six forward in a few years.

10 ADAM HELEWKA, LW
AGE 21 TEAM Red Deer (WHL)
A smart player who can finish, he has been steadily developing into a two-way player.

TAMPA BAY LIGHTNING

STANLEY CUP ODDS /// 8-1

BY ERIK ERLENDSSON

Unfinished business. After a berth in the Stanley Cup final in 2015 and a subsequent trip to the Eastern Conference final, that's how Tampa Bay Lightning feel heading into 2016-17.

After two years of little turnover, coach Jon Cooper will again work with essentially the same group. That's because captain Steven Stamkos, who appeared on the verge of leaving the organization that drafted him first overall in 2008, inked an eight-year deal worth an annual $8.5 million. Being so close the past two seasons factored into Stamkos' decision.

Cornerstone Victor Hedman signed an eight-year extension two days later for reasonable dollars ($7.9 million AAV), another move from GM Steve Yzerman ensuring the Lightning will remain a Stanley Cup contender for years to come.

OFFENSE The Lightning remain deep up front with a mixture of speed, skill and grit. With Stamkos, a two-time Rocket Richard Trophy winner, back in the fold the Lightning return all of their big offensive weapons. Nikita Kucherov is coming off a 30-goal season and Tyler Johnson figures to rebound to his 25-goal form, while Jonathan Drouin – exiled for half of last season after requesting a trade and being locked in a stalemate with management – displayed his talents during Tampa Bay's playoff run. The Bolts can also strike from the blueline. Hedman is coming off his third season of double-digit goals, while Anton Stralman has recorded consecutive 30-point campaigns.

DEFENSE Commitment to team defense put Tampa Bay in the top 10 after finishing middle of the pack the previous two seasons. While Hedman and Stralman have combined to form one of the top pairings in the league, the emergence of Andrej Sustr as a second-pair, right-handed shot to complement Jason Garrison provided a steadier top four. Veteran Braydon Coburn, who signed a three-year extension before the end of last season, offers stability after Matt Carle was bought out this summer. If injuries become a factor, though, a lack of depth could have a big impact on the club.

GOALTENDING Bishop has been the backbone of Tampa Bay's success the past three seasons, finishing as a Vezina Trophy finalist twice. But 2012 first-rounder Andrei Vasilevskiy, who stepped in for an injured Bishop in the Eastern Conference final, is pushing for more playing time and figures to take over the No. 1 job at some point, perhaps as early as this season. As long as they remain together, however, the duo comprises one of the top tandems in the league.

SPECIAL TEAMS For an offensively gifted team, Tampa Bay has been anything but while on the man advantage. The team went from having an average power play in recent years to nearly the league's worst. Although the Lightning have one of the game's top gunners in Stamkos, they lack a true quarterback. The addition of Todd Richards to the coaching staff figures to add a new approach. The penalty kill has shot up from 23rd in 2013-14 to seventh each of the past two seasons, becoming an area of strength under associate coach Rick Bowness.

PLAYOFF RECORD
25-22 (since 2012)

INTANGIBLES After two deep playoff runs, this young team has grown into a veteran group of savvy post-season performers. The Lightning feature a balance of strong leadership, youth, skill and grit and are capable of playing any style of game. They have learned to how to win, especially close games, and have plenty of game-breakers.

ROOKIES A club with so much playoff experience gained doesn't figure to see many contributions from the farm team, barring injuries. But Slater Koekkoek, Tampa Bay's 10th-overall pick from 2012, took a big step toward becoming a regular on the blueline after a strong playoff performance.

X-FACTOR Although Bishop is a Vezina candidate, his name popped up in trade scenarios because of the upcoming expansion draft and his impending unrestricted free agency after this season. Yzerman has stated a decision between Bishop and Vasilevskiy has to be made, and if it's not done before the season, tension will loom over the crease.

THE BRASS For the second consecutive off-season, the Lightning made a change in the coaching ranks, bringing in Richards (former coach of the Minnesota Wild and Columbus Blue Jackets) to join Cooper. Yzerman, meanwhile, continues to prove his mettle as a GM with his ability to retain homegrown talent at reasonable cost.

SCOUTING REPORT
Watch for Howden's points to jump now that top-line center Brayden Point is off to the pros. Howden has size and a nice two-way game, but he can also go on offensive tears, as he did at the world under-18s.

TORONTO MAPLE LEAFS

PREDICTION

STANLEY CUP ODDS /// 90-1

BY MIKE BROPHY

Everything fell into place for the Toronto Maple Leafs last season. They wanted 30th place and they got it. They wanted Auston Matthews with the No. 1 pick and, well, you know the rest of the story.

And now that they've acquired a dependable starting goaltender in Frederik Andersen from the Anaheim Ducks, it raises the question: is the organization trying to speed up the rebuild? Perhaps a little. But the Maple Leafs will continue to feel the "pain" coach Mike Babcock promised when he was hired: the team will inject even more youth into the lineup, so it's best that Leafs Nation not get too excited about the immediate future. Some of the kids who looked good during their NHL stints last season appeared overwhelmed in the AHL playoffs with the Toronto Marlies. It takes time.

OFFENSE Mike Babcock's priority was fixing Toronto's perennial problems on the defensive side of the puck, so offense took a back seat. P-A Parenteau was the Leafs' lone 20-goal scorer, and they elected not to re-sign him. James van Riemsdyk had 14 goals in 40 games and was on pace for 29 before getting injured. Matthews will give the offense a shot in the arm. He'll be insulated down the middle by Nazem Kadri and Tyler Bozak, but it's expected Matthews will surge to the top of the depth chart. William Nylander, who had six goals and 13 points in 22 games with the Leafs during a late-season stint, will also help. Mitch Marner is a wild card. The CHL's most valuable player has NHL skill, but at just 163 pounds it's uncertain whether he can handle playing with the big boys just yet. Fourth-year defenseman Morgan Rielly has put up point totals of 27, 29 and 36 in his first three years, and there's every reason to believe he'll continue his upward trajectory.

DEFENSE Toronto allowed 17 fewer goals under Babcock than the season before. It's a start. When you're aiming for the No. 1 overall pick, keeping pucks out of your net isn't always a top priority. Nevertheless, the back end remains a major work in progress. Beyond Rielly and Jake Gardiner, there's a scarcity of skill. Matt Hunwick, Frank Corrado, Martin Marincin, Connor Carrick and Roman Polak are all bottom-pair blueliners. There's top-four potential in UFA addition Nikita Zaitsev, a right-shot 24-year-old who led the 2016 KHL playoffs in scoring by defensemen.

GOALTENDING Andersen is the new starter, signing a five-year deal after the Leafs traded for him in June. The inconsistent Jonathan Bernier was shipped to the Ducks in a separate deal a few weeks later, creating cap space and opening the door for Garret Sparks as a potential backup. Andersen was formidable in a tandem role with John Gibson in Anaheim, but this will be his first foray into No. 1-netminder territory, and the task of carrying the load under the bright Toronto spotlight will be immense.

SPECIAL TEAMS Toronto's power play was one of the worst in the league again, though the penalty kill was respectable. The addition of Matthews and Nylander, along with a healthy 'JVR,' will help the man advantage, while Andersen will help the Leafs build on their much improved penalty kill.

INTANGIBLES The Leafs remain a young team, with the likes of Nylander, Marner, Zach Hyman, Connor Brown, Nikita Soshnikov, Josh Leivo, Viktor Loov, Rinat Valiev, Kasperi Kapanen and Carrick all in the running for full-time NHL employment. Babcock has proven he can lead a group of veterans to success, but can he do it with kids? Summer signee Matt Martin joins Leo Komarov in the role of "protector" for the fresh-faced group.

ROOKIES Matthews will be a Calder Trophy candidate. Nylander and Marner could be in the running, too. If the Leafs hold true to the plan, there will be a handful of rookies in the starting lineup. Even those who don't make the team out of training camp will make the short trip from Ricoh Coliseum to Air Canada Centre for some significant action.

X-FACTOR If Andersen provides out-of-this-world goaltending, a playoff spot wouldn't be out of the question. The Leafs were in a lot of games in 2015-16, even though winning went against the big picture. Pittsburgh won a title with speed and skill, and Toronto is trying to follow that template.

THE BRASS As much as the management team has vowed to remain patient, we're talking about three-time Stanley Cup winner GM Lou Lamoriello, three-time Cup champ president Brendan Shanahan and one-time Cup winner and two-time Olympic gold medallist Babcock. They share a hunger to win yet have stayed true to the "Shanaplan."

VANCOUVER CANUCKS

BY BEN KUZMA

The Vancouver Canucks are going for it. Not the Stanley Cup – just the playoffs. The franchise switch has been flipped from developing young talent to trying to compete because there's no appetite in the market for a total rebuild. A crying need for offense was addressed on the first day of free agency when 30-goal scorer Loui Eriksson was signed to a six-year, $36-million deal. He has a history with Henrik and Daniel Sedin, as the trio combined to help Sweden's national team win the 2013 World Championship.

But Eriksson is not a savior. Vancouver scored 50 fewer goals last season than in 2014-15, so jump-starting the entire offense is critical.

The Canucks lost assistant coach Glen Gulutzan to Calgary. He was replaced by six-time Stanley Cup champion Doug Jarvis, who should help improve the power play and faceoffs.

OFFENSE Health is wealth. Brandon Sutter was limited by a sports hernia surgery and a fractured jaw, while Alexander Edler was lost for the season to a leg fracture. Henrik Sedin dropped from 73 to 55 points because of various injuries, though Daniel Sedin still managed 28 goals. Jannik Hansen (22 goals), Bo Horvat (16) and Sven Baertschi (15) are coming off career campaigns, but there's a significant drop-off with the loss of Radim Vrbata to free agency. Emerson Etem scored four goals in the last five regular season games but seven goals in 39 games were only worth a one-year, one-way, "show-us" deal. Vancouver searched but failed to land another winger with size and scoring ability. Swedish League MVP Anton Rodin, Vancouver's second-round pick in 2009, signed a one-year deal, but not much is expected from the 25-year-old who didn't excel in 111 AHL contests.

DEFENSE The arrival of Erik Gudbranson in a May trade with Florida that sent rookie Jared McCann to the Panthers signalled a change in direction on the back end. The Canucks were too easy to play against, and the hulking Gudbranson is expected to change that dynamic. The defense combined for just 23 goals, tied for third-lowest in the NHL. Although Dan Hamhuis left for the Dallas Stars in free agency, and Matt Bartkowski and Yannick Weber also hit the open market, it could be addition by subtraction. Edler and Chris Tanev form a credible top pairing, while sophomore Ben Hutton, who finished third in scoring among rookie defensemen, will benefit from teaming with Gudbranson. That leaves Luca Sbisa and Philip Larsen in a third pairing role with the intimidating Nikita Tryamkin, intriguing Andrey Pedan and Alex Biega as depth options.

GOALTENDING Ryan Miller could have been dealt in the summer. But even though the 36-year-old starter will earn $6 million in his expiring deal, he's staying for a reason. With Jacob Markstrom, who proved in 33 games last season he's more than a fill-in, the Canucks have a good one-two punch to win low-scoring games. Miller will benefit from a tandem arrangement. Thatcher Demko is the stopper of the future, but he's just turning pro.

SPECIAL TEAMS There's hope for the power play, because anything will be an improvement. Eriksson, who had 10 power play goals last year, will help, as will new assistant Jarvis. The penalty kill struggled and missed the injured Sutter but benefitted from breakaway threat Hansen.

INTANGIBLES The Canucks need the size of sophomore Jake Virtanen, but he could start in the AHL to get more playing time. Horvat probably needs to be elevated to second-line status, but Vancouver could play the seniority card and keep Sutter in that spot.

ROOKIES At one point, the Canucks had nine injured regulars and seven rookies in their lineup. Nine rookies made their NHL debuts. That won't be the case in 2016-17. Unless 2016 fifth-overall pick Olli Juolevi shocks everybody by cracking the roster, there won't be a traditional rookie dinner.

X-FACTOR Willie Desjardins received a vote of confidence, but a 26-point fall and no playoff berth raised eyebrows. However, the injury-riddled Canucks used 40 players, and Desjardins will get a lot of rope to turn the club around. If he doesn't, Jarvis is a replacement option. So is Utica Comets coach Travis Green.

THE BRASS President of hockey operations Trevor Linden and GM Jim Benning are trying to win now while building for the future. The latter would be easier with better asset management. The Canucks received nothing for departed free agents Vrbata and Hamhuis.

THATCHER DEMKO

FUTURE WATCH

1 OLLI JUOLEVI, D
AGE 18 TEAM London (OHL)
A smart player who reads the game extremely well. Poised and smooth with the puck.

2 THATCHER DEMKO, G
AGE 20 TEAM Boston College (HE)
Intelligent and driven, he has shown improvement in his positioning and tracking.

3 BROCK BOESER, RW
AGE 19 TEAM North Dakota (NCHC)
A blend of power and finesse, he shows no fear taking the puck to the net. Excellent release.

4 BRENDAN GAUNCE, LW
AGE 22 TEAM Utica (AHL)
Must recover the edge that had him almost make the Canucks out of camp last year.

5 JORDAN SUBBAN, D
AGE 21 TEAM Utica (AHL)
An offensive force, great with the puck on his stick. Much improved defensively.

6 GUILLAUME BRISEBOIS, D
AGE 19 TEAM A-Bathurst (QMJHL)
All-situations defenseman with smarts. Smooth skating gives him excellent mobility.

7 ANDREY PEDAN, D
AGE 23 TEAM Utica (AHL)
A tough, physical defenseman. Positionally sound in his own end and a solid skater.
ACQUIRED From NYI, Nov. 2014 NHL '16-17

8 NIKITA TRYAMKIN, D
AGE 22 TEAM Yek. Avtomobilist (KHL)
Will be an imposing figure on an NHL blueline once he adjusts to North American game.

9 WILLIAM LOCKWOOD, RW
AGE 18 TEAM U.S. NTDP (USHL)
Small, quick, offense-oriented player. Must bulk up during tenure at Michigan.
ACQUIRED 64th overall, 2016 NHL '20-21

10 COLE CASSELS, RW
AGE 21 TEAM Utica (AHL)
A versatile player who could fit a penalty-killing role. His offense dried up as a rookie pro.

2016 NO. 1 DRAFT PICK

NAME

POSITION
DEFENSEMAN

2015-16
LONDON KNIGHTS

SCOUTING REPORT
Juolevi pulled off a rare stunt last year, winning world junior gold and the Memorial Cup. His efficiency and mobility are calling cards and the Finnish star's patience with the puck makes him deadly on offense.

WASHINGTON CAPITALS

BY BRIAN MCNALLY

The Washington Capitals had a decorated 2015-16 campaign, earning the Presidents' Trophy with by far the most points in the NHL. Barry Trotz won the Jack Adams Award for top coach while goalie Braden Holtby won the Vezina Trophy. Alex Ovechkin again cruised to 50 goals.

But the season was a failure. That's not a harsh judgment. The Capitals themselves said all season long it was Cup-or-bust. They went bust in the second round against the Pittsburgh Penguins. With most of the roster returning, there is nothing left to do but try again.

The only major move was a trade for Lars Eller. Expectations will remain high for at least another season, and it will be up to the same cast to make up for last season's disappointment.

OFFENSE No team can count on as reliable a goal scorer as Ovechkin. He hit 50 goals on the nose, the third season in a row and seventh time in his career he's reached that mark. Washington wasn't a one-man show, though. Evgeny Kuznetsov had a true breakout campaign with a team-leading 77 points. Fellow center Nicklas Backstrom posted 70. T.J. Oshie added 26 goals in his first season in D.C. There were six 20-goal scorers, and all return except Jason Chimera, who left via free agency. The Capitals were second in the league in goals per game. The one missing skill set? Maybe a bruising net presence like what they once had in Joel Ward and Troy Brouwer.

BRADEN HOLTBY

DEFENSE These aren't the go-go Caps of seasons past. The blueline doesn't have star power, but it's a steady group that allowed the second-fewest goals in the league. Karl Alzner and Matt Niskanen were a reliable big-minute pairing. Unfortunately, John Carlson (ankle) and Brooks Orpik (femur) were limited to 56 and 41 games, respectively, so the second pair varied, pushing young players like Dmitry Orlov and Nate Schmidt into bigger roles. Washington wasn't able to add to the group, so depth could be an issue. Top prospect Madison Bowey, 21, could be a useful fill-in after an impressive rookie season in the AHL.

GOALTENDING Holtby won the Vezina as the NHL's top goaltender. He ranked sixth in goals-against average and seventh in save percentage en route to winning 48 games, tying Martin Brodeur's record. He's in his prime, under contract for four years and has playoff experience. Backup Philipp Grubauer appeared in 22 games with a .918 save percentage and helped trim Holtby's workload from 73 to 66 games.

SPECIAL TEAMS Washington's personnel practically guarantees a deadly power play. Ovechkin alone scored 19 goals on the man advantage. Newcomer Oshie added 11. With playmakers Backstrom and Kuznetsov, and even Marcus Johansson, the Capitals have options. Carlson was a force in the playoffs with four power play goals. The penalty kill was excellent as well and might get a slight makeover with Eller's addition and role players like Mike Richards moving on.

INTANGIBLES The Capitals hoped adding Game 7 legend Justin Williams would lead to a playoff breakthrough. It didn't work out, but Williams knows what it takes to win a Cup. And that's important for the Capitals, because no one else on this roster has done it. But it's still a veteran team with loads of playoff experience. Even Andre Burakovsky, Washington's youngest contributor at 21, has appeared in 23 playoff games.

ROOKIES No rookie is expected to make the opening night lineup, but Washington will need help at some point. Jakub Vrana, a first-rounder in 2014, broke his wrist early last season, but he had 24 goals and 48 points in 57 AHL games including playoffs. Bowey played 70 games in his first full season of pro, posting four goals and 29 points, and he'll see some NHL time in his second.

X-FACTOR Even Trotz has said the Capitals will take a step back this season after almost everything broke their way in 2015-16. Can they manage if Ovechkin scores just 40 goals? If Holtby isn't quite as good? If they don't coast to a playoff berth? Some adversity might serve Washington well heading into the post-season.

THE BRASS Trotz has done fine work in his short stay so far with the Capitals, winning the Jack Adams last year and building on his long tenure with the Nashville Predators. But he, like his team, still has yet to get past the second round. GM Brian MacLellan is known to aggressively target his group's weaknesses.

PREDICTION 5TH in CENTRAL

BY TIM CAMPBELL

Winnipeg fans had trouble galore with the pain part of the Jets' growing pains as they watched their team regress to the bottom of the Central Division. They saw a 99-point playoff team in 2014-15 go deliberately young, holding jobs open for prospects, holding back cap space and eschewing experience.

Consistency of philosophy hurt, and it took until the draft lottery for some clarity to come back, when the Jets vaulted from the sixth spot up to No. 2, and optimism returned as Winnipeg landed a world of promise in sniper Patrik Laine, who is pointed toward an NHL debut this fall. But Laine is just 18, and a team that was among the two or three youngest, one with numerous near-ready prospects, will not move far from that mark. There was a nod to the value of experience with the signings of Shawn Matthias and Brian Strait, but the growing part of growing pains will rest with the young core of Mark Scheifele, Jacob Trouba, Nikolaj Ehlers and maybe Connor Hellebuyck.

OFFENSE Blake Wheeler posted a career-best season, averaging nearly a point per game, and became a strong captain candidate in the wake of the deadline trade of Andrew Ladd. Just as important is the emergence of Scheifele, who was the NHL's top goal scorer (17) and point producer (34) from Feb. 18 on. That 61-point season is the strongest case ever that the Jets have a formidable 1-2 punch at center with Scheifele and the underrated Bryan Little. If Ehlers steps forward after a 15-goal debut and Laine earns his keep in the top six, the Jets will have valuable upgrade of skill. Factor in the unique talents of behemoth Dustin Byfuglien, who had 19 goals and 53 points a year ago, and Winnipeg has hope to bounce off the Central floor.

DEFENSE Out of the gate, things weren't adding up defensively, and the team never really recovered to its top-10 status. Prone to major blunders, in the end the goals-against number rose from 210 to 239. Unsettled pairings didn't help, but coach Paul Maurice has arrived at the solution to distributing enough ice for his three right-shot blueliners, Byfuglien, Trouba and Tyler Myers. The plan began late last season, with Trouba moving to the left side with Byfuglien, leaving Myers with Toby Enstrom to round out the top four.

GOALTENDING All eyes will be on the crease that produced the third-worst save percentage in NHL. Goalie of the future Hellebuyck, 23, was excellent in the first half of his recall but then trended steadily down. Pavelec missed 33 games with a knee injury and overall regressed back to his unimpressive career percentages. He's into a contract year. Michael Hutchinson is signed for two more years likely as some expansion-draft protection.

SPECIAL TEAMS Awful in 2015-16. Combined with goaltending and defense, it was the Jets' poison pill. No team was worse at special teams, as a No. 30 power play and No. 25 penalty kill resulted in a 23-goal deficit and made up almost the team's entire shortfall in total goals for and against. Laine figures to have power play impact, but Mathieu Perreault and Byfuglien are also key in the scheme if there is to be improvement from a league-worst 38 power play goals.

INTANGIBLES The question of the captaincy and lettered leaders needs to be settled and must include some representation of the emerging core. Wheeler and Scheifele are good bets here. Byfuglien's five-year contract extension provides stability, and that will be enhanced once the Jets do the same with Trouba and Scheifele.

ROOKIES There are a number of candidates, and just a couple spots open. Laine arrives with plenty of hype – his explosive release has drawn comparisons to Alex Ovechkin. Meanwhile, NCAA scoring leader Kyle Connor has been underestimated at opponents' peril. Brendan Lemieux's arrival would surprise no one, and Nic Petan and Joel Armia, who had a taste last season, are also near graduation.

X-FACTOR What the Jets need most is something positive in the crease. Goaltending alone will determine the fate of the season. Is Hellebuyck ready? Can Pavelec take it up a level? The same-old will not bode well for a return to the playoffs.

THE BRASS GM Kevin Cheveldayoff was once again under the gun for choosing to preserve cap space and going young off the team's 2015 playoff appearance. Maurice is clearly in sync with Cheveldayoff in terms of the youthful plan, but patience with this philosophy, though essential, is no easy chore for the rabid fan base.

AN (EXTRA)ORDINARY CENTURY

Love 'em or hate 'em, the Toronto Maple Leafs are celebrating 100 years of NHL hockey excellence. Well, the first 50 years were pretty darned good

MORGAN RIELLY

OVER THE PAST century, the Toronto Maple Leafs have done some seemingly impossible things. They made a folk hero out of Tie Domi. They managed to alienate one of their all-time greatest players to the point he won't let them retire his number. They've inspired fans to throw waffles. And their owner once used money he won by betting on a long-shot horse to purchase King Clancy, the greatest defenseman the franchise has ever seen.

And they've managed to be universally loved and hated. Technically, that's impossible, but again, we're talking about an organization that seems to gain more adulation – and the revenues that come with it – by giving their fans less. You may not have heard, but the Leafs are celebrating 100 years of hockey excellence this season. And there's so much hockey excellence that their centennial season will span 14 months. Because you can only cram so much super-duper awesomeness into 365 days.

The centennial season comes at a time when things are looking more hopeful than ever. With Brendan Shanahan and Lou Lamoriello at the tiller, Mike Babcock behind the bench and an embarrassment of riches when it comes to young players and prospects, there's the distinct feeling the Maple Leafs finally got this right. That will please those who live and die by this franchise, whose unconditional love will finally be rewarded. And it will no doubt drive the haters to distraction. There are almost equal numbers of both. So as The Center of the Hockey Universe™ celebrates 100 years of Leafdom, we present observations on the Maple Leafs celebrations from both perspectives:

LEAF LOVERS: "I can't wait to see what the Leafs have in store for their 100th season. It's going to be awesome. All those Hall of Famers, all that history, those Stanley Cups."

LEAF HATERS: "Are you kidding me? How are they going to 'celebrate' 50 years without even reaching the Cup final? Oh yeah, and their own propaganda refers to this as 'The Maple Leafs Centennial Season presented by Molson Canadian.' Seriously? That's like the most Toronto thing ever."

LEAF LOVERS: "I hear a panel of hockey experts is going to name the top 100 Leafs of all-time. Man, that's going to be tough. So many great players. I wonder who they'll be."

LEAF HATERS: "Yeah, where are Lou Franceschetti and Claire Alexander on that list? Probably somewhere in the top 20."

LEAF LOVERS: "The Leafs haven't won a Cup in 50 years, but they haven't been that bad. Those teams in '92 and '93 with Doug Gilmour were right on the cusp of greatness, and two of Pat Quinn's teams reached the semifinal."

WE'RE TALKING ABOUT AN ORGANIZATION THAT SEEMS TO GAIN MORE ADULATION BY GIVING THEIR FANS LESS

LEAF HATERS: "Sure, keep reminding yourselves of the time you almost came close to winning something. And if I hear one more time about how Kerry Fraser and Wayne Gretzky conspired to rob the Leafs of a Stanley Cup 23 years ago, I'm going to throw up."

LEAF LOVERS: "Wow, you look at this group of prospects and there's a lot to like. Mitch Marner is just too good for junior and, boy, is he going to be a handful for NHL defensemen. And why doesn't the NHL save time and award the Calder to Auston Matthews right now."

LEAF HATERS: "Where do I start? Bernie Parent? Gary Nylund? Luke Schenn? Steve Sullivan? Tuukka Rask? The pick that turned out to be Scott Niedermayer? I can keep going. The Leafs have made a cottage industry out of either destroying or trading good young players, so if I were Marner or Matthews, I'd be worried about my future."

LEAF LOVERS: "But did you see these kids in the summer development camp? They lit it up like a Christmas tree."

LEAF HATERS: "Yeah, because they were playing against a bunch of kids who are in a development camp. Just wait until these guys go up against established NHL players. They'll get eaten alive."

LEAF LOVERS: "After years of searching, we finally have the best coach in Babcock. He'll turn things around. You wait and see."

LEAF HATERS: "The Leafs once again did what they've done for years. They overpaid a guy for accomplishments he earned somewhere else. Babcock chased the money and the chance to have a school named after him. With that cash, he could just buy one."

LEAF LOVERS: "The atmosphere at the Air Canada Centre is amazing. The place is always full and these people really know their hockey. Toronto has, without a doubt, the most loyal fans in the game."

LEAF HATERS: "They have to be the most loyal fans to put up with the past 50 years. And the only time these people ever seem to get excited is when they play The Good Old Hockey Game by Stompin' Tom Connors, which they've done with five minutes left in every game since the beginning of time. And the way the Leafs have played, by that time half the crowd has already left to beat traffic."

LEAF LOVERS: "I like that Morgan Rielly kid. I think he can win a Norris someday."

LEAF HATERS: "If he ever does, that will be great. Then the Leafs will only be six Norris Trophies behind Nicklas Lidstrom."

LEAF LOVERS: "So excited to see what games I'll get in my season ticket group."

LEAF HATERS: "Well, if you're short, you can have mine. Just the other day, I left two Leafs tickets on my dashboard, only to have someone smash my window and leave two more." H
